Letter from the Editor

Heather Armstrong

This is my first year as the Editor in Chief of The Prairie Light Review and I must say that I had no idea what I was in for! I was quickly impressed by how much my team and I would be crafting this magazine. It's amazing the amount of support that we received with so many submissions. I have to thank the many people who have trusted their work to us. Without your submissions this magazine would not be as varied and engaging as it is this issue. I know as a writer myself how much trust it takes to have someone else read or view your work. Thank you for trusting The Prairie Light Review staff with your literary and visual talents.

I must also thank the other editors on staff; Kristina, your expertise is so valued. Thank you for showing me the ropes and helping me to see the big picture of what it means to publish this magazine. I wish you the best in your future endeavors, both in writing and academia. Rosie, thank you for the consistent e-mail updates and for your many hours spent working on this issue. I appreciate your diligence and hard work putting everything together. Also, big thanks to Amy, Rebecca, Melissa and Ralph for coming to class and helping make this issue possible.

I also want to personally thank my husband Dan for understanding how important this magazine is to me and for waiting patiently for dinner when I had to send, "Just one more e-mail."

My final thank you goes to Jackie McGrath. Thank you for your patience and helpful remarks. As our advisor this semester, you helped us understand that PLR is more than just a student-run publication. I appreciate you doing all the behind the scenes e-mailing, and photocopying as well as checking in to make sure we were on track. We could not have made such a wonderful issue without your hard work and support. I undoubtedly would have been lost without your assurance and guidance. Thanks for your part in making this magazine an integral part of the College of DuPage and the community.
