Homecoming Weekend, "Autumn By Moonlight," Oct. 25-26

For the first time in the short history of the College of DuPage, a Homecoming Queen, elected by the student body, will reign over two days of festivities beginning with a Pep-Rally and Mixer Friday night, October 25, at the DuPage County Fairgrounds beginning at 8:00, and ending with a dinner dance, "Autumn by Moonlight" to be held at the Arlington Carousel in Arlington Heights.

In between these two events will be a big football game between the College of DuPage Chaparrals and the Rams of Wright Junior College of Chicago. The game, which will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, October 26, will be played on the West Chicago High School Field in West Chicago.

It is not known whether or not a car-caravan will be held but it is a fact that the Student Government Cheering Section, open to all big-mouthed students, will be quite active.

The cheering section, which is led by ASB president, Larry Lemkau and his magic horn, Old Gabriel, last week performed miracles in the game between the DuPage Chaparrals and the Air Force Falcons. Members of the cheering section, which included such well-known figures as Ron Koptki, Mike Lewis, Dave Bishop, Donna Dellutri, Courier Staff members, and many others, were all hoarse from shouting by the end of the first quarter. The cheering section has issued a challenge to the so-called "Bleacher Bums". As one member said, "We can out yell anybody."

At the pep rally-mixer on Friday night, the Homecoming Queen and her court will be introduced, along with the captains of the football team and the Pom-Pon squad.

The Homecoming Queen will be chosen by the student body when the students vote for senatorial seats on Tuesday, October 22.

A list of the names of the girls will be on the senate ballot. The girls running for Homecoming Queen are:

Cindy Hermann
Karen Repczynski
Linda MacLennon
Mickey O'Donnell
Kim Remus
Barb Jensen
Susan Nichols
Debbie Ford
Irene Moy
Kathy Conry
Diane Cherry

Marian Brady

During half-time of Saturday's football game the Queen and her court will be paraded around the field in cars after which the Pom-Pon squad will put on another of their great routines.

After the Chaparrals have hopefully ran the Rams off the playing field, a dinner dance, "Autumn by Moonlight" will be held. The dance will last from 8:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. and will be held at the Arlington Carousel located on Euclid Avenue, just one block east of Route 53 in Arlington Heights. Entertainment will be provided by Guy Fricano, his orchestra, and the Monterreys. Tickets are $10 a couple and are on sale at the Office of Student Activities at the Student Center through Tuesday, October 22.

Admission to both the Friday night pep-rally mixer and Saturday's football contest is free for students presenting an activity card.

Job Opportunities Boom Around Campuses

by Eth Lawrence

The job opportunities for College of DuPage students are tremendous. According to Paul Harrington, director of student financial aid, a total of 130 students are now working for the C of D. The maximum number of hours a student can work in a week is 15. These working students are employed on maintenance crews, as teacher's aids, clerks, traffic controllers, and in other assorted jobs on the various campuses.

The going-rate for new workers is $1.50 an hour while students who have worked for three quarters get $1.75 an hour. Odd jobs that require odd hours or physically heavy work pay a little more. These wages are more than the minimum wage law requires, $1.40 an hour. A financial aid committee, which is now being formed, hopes to review the situation before the Jan. 1 deadline when minimum wages will be increased to $1.65 an hour.

Paul Harrington

The advantages of having a job on campus are obvious. Transportation is not needed and the hours can be arranged around the student's schedule.

Harrington, with the help of a part-time secretary, is having quite a bit of trouble putting out a job opportunity bulletin, but not because the response from the community and students has been poor. The problem is that local firms are all anxious to offer positions to C of D students so it is almost impossible for Harrington to publish all the ads for help. It would take too much time and too much paper.

There is no way to record how many College of DuPage students have acquired jobs through the job opportunity bulletin, but Harrington estimates that quite a few are filled each week.

The number of openings for work far exceeds the number of students who need jobs. Every week there are more than 20 requests for jobs. In the first two weeks of school, this figure nearly doubled. It is Harrington's procedure to post the job opportunity bulletin in the C of D's various facilities, such as the Glen Ellyn "Y" where employers or employees of local firms will come in contact with it.

Harrington said, "Evidently the local companies are quite pleased with our students as workers -- most have requested that we advertise for more students for their companies. In fact, some companies hope to employ our part-time working students as full time after graduation.

Set President's Reception for Sunday, Oct. 20

The second annual President's Reception for the College of DuPage will be sponsored by the Executive Board of Student Government on Sunday, Oct. 20, 1 to 6 p.m. This year's reception is basically to acquaint the students with college activities and to provide an opportunity for parents and students to meet with the president, Dr. Rodney Berg. Parents and students will also see the facilities offered at the Student Center.

Invitations have been sent out to all freshman students. Students receiving invitations are requested to arrive in shifts. Don Preston, student government comptroller, said, "As usual, due to limited facilities, this arrangement was the only way to accommodate the number of invited guests."

Refreshments will be served by the College of DuPage Pom-Pon Squad. Entertainment will be provided by the College of DuPage Concert Chorus. Attendance is encouraged by the reception organizers. A large turn-out is expected.

Courier Asks: Was It Us Or...

After placing an ad in last week's Courier, Parivash Teymourian, from Iran, got this response: "I received 10 calls and took the first two offers for rides. They were all very friendly," the young co-ed said.

Oh, by the way. They were all boys.

Petitions Extended Until Oct. 18

A lack of applicants for open senatorial seats resulted in the extension of the deadline for petitions until Friday, Oct. 18. Ron Kopitke, chairman of the Student Government Elections Committee, said he hoped the extra time would allow interested students who were unaware of the deadline to still qualify to run.

The last elections, held last April, developed interest because of two opposing parties - Leadership for the Students of DuPage, and the Students for United Government. This year, only the SUG party has put up a slate of candidates.

Senators who are elected will have the responsibility of originating rules by which the student body must operate. They are also responsible for assuring that those rules which have already been passed by their predecessors are adhered to and carried out.

Those senators who are elected will serve three quarters. Their term will end with the beginning of the summer quarter. Their successors will be elected in the April election.

Campaigning was allowed to begin for this election on Monday, Oct. 14. It will be allowed to continue until Monday, Oct. 21. No campaigning will be allowed on the day of elections, Oct. 22.

Vets Organize Club

Eleven College of DuPage students and one faculty member have decided to form a Veterans club for any student veteran who would be interested. At their first formal meeting last week, Steve Billman and Mark Stanich were elected temporary heads of the newly-formed organization. Carter Carroll, history instructor at the College, is the faculty advisor and link with the administration.

Although there are over 150 veterans attending classes here, only the hard core eleven have enthusiastically worked on the important details concerning the formation of a new club.

According to Billman, the Veterans club was formed not only for the benefit of students who have served in the armed forces, but also for those students who would seek information and advice from an ex-serviceman himself.

"The regular service recruiter tends to mention only the advantages of military life, while our purpose is to try to give unbiased advice; not to discourage, but to inform," said Billman. He said a student might come to a member of the club in order to find out what the service might offer him and how he can get the best out of the service.

Carroll said the primary goals of the club are: 1. organization; 2. election of officers; 3. development of a constitution, and 4. recognition by the college as a sanctioned organization of the school. There will be more to the meetings than just reminiscing on army days, he said.

Persons interested in joining may contact Carroll at the Glen Hill faculty office.

Pass-Fail Petition Up for Study

By T. Dennis O'Sullivan

A petition, circulated and signed by students, requesting that the possibility of changing to a pass-fail grading system here be studied, has been submitted to student government.

Ron Kopitke, senator, said he expects action to be taken on the petition soon. If approved by the student senate, it will then be sent to John Paris, dean of students, for study. What action would be taken should Paris also approve the idea is uncertain.

One possibility is that Paris would ask that a committee be established to evaluate the present system as well as the pass-fail and others. The findings of the committee would be presented to Paris in the form of a recommendation. Paris would then submit it to Dr. Rodney Berg, president of the college, for action.

In any state-supported community college only the president may make a decision or take action on a matter of this type.

Paris was asked what some of the implications of changing the grading would be. He noted the tremendous task which would be involved in changing to new record-keeping forms, transcripts, and grade reports in addition to completely reprogramming the computer.

Pass-Fail Petition

Paris emphasized, however, that there would be no hesitation in doing this should a fact-finding committee recommend it, and the president approve it.

"I think we have to revise our grading system, but I think pass-fail is too narrow. It doesn't do justice to the student," Paris said.

Not making allowances for those students who do exceptional work, and those who just get by but do manage to learn something seems to be the cause of Paris' hesitation. He feels the recognition of varying degrees of achievement takes precedence now because of the structure and attitudes of our society.

Paris noted that several colleges which had adopted the pass-fail system are now dropping it.

John Paris

He said that students might have some trouble transferring to a school which is not on the same system. Some Illinois four-year colleges and universities which do not have the system set rules for transfer students such as: they must have more passes than fails; they must spend one term at the school to establish a grade-point average. Students also may have to take comprehensive examinations to prove their knowledge in certain areas before being admitted to specialized areas of study.

Director of Counseling, James Godshalk, also believes that a revision is needed in our grading system.

James Godshalk

Godshalk thinks, however, that the pass-fail system would be more efficient than our present means of measuring the amount of knowledge gained. It could serve to fill the gap between what we now have and what is really needed.

What is needed, and now being developed, Godshalk said, is an intricate and continuing process by which a student's total learning process can be evaluated.

"It is kind of presumptuous of to decide for each individual what is superior performance of learning in a given class and therefore evaluate him on an A, B, C, D, F evaluation," were the words Godshalk used to express the shortcomings of our present method of grading.

Godshalk was also asked if he thought a senior college or university might only regard a student with passes in his courses as having done just average of C work. Godshalk replied, "No, I don't think they would do anything that arbitrary. I think they would count the credits, but they wouldn't count towards his grade point". The student would then have the benefit of the work he had done, and his grade point average would depend on what he did at the school to which he transferred.

Student Opinions Do Count, Says Finley McGrew

Even though the average college student is not old enough to vote, his opinion does carry weight, according to Finley McGrew, administrative assistant to Rep. John C. Erlenborn (R. Ill.).

McGrew said in a brief interview with a Courier reporter Wednesday "hundreds of letters come in each week, and each is read and considered carefully, regardless of its writer."

Pictorial Magazine To Be Published in Early January

A College of DuPage quarterly magazine, consisting of between 36 and 48 pages, will be distributed to students during the first week of Winter Quarter classes. The magazine, which will be almost completely pictorial, will present an in-depth study of life at the College of DuPage.

Bruce Larsen, editor of this year's quarterly, needs help. "There is a desperate need for bright, intelligent young women to aid the quarterly staff and to learn laboratory procedure and techniques," Larsen said.

The Quarterly headquarters, located in the Courier office at the College of DuPage Student Center, boasts excellent equipment.

Larsen and his staff of photographers are enthusiastic about prospects for this year's Quarterly. After spending over $600 on equipment for the photography lab and untold hours on taking pictures all around the area, they hope to make the first edition of the quarterly a memorable one.

Stage Crew Set for "The Crucible"

Rehearsals began last week for "The Crucible," under the direction of Ray Montgomery, assistant director. Crews have been set up for the play.

Working on properties are Mary Lou Kennedy, Bill Coletta, and Jerri Johnson. Peggy Connelly will be in charge of costumes. Publicity director is Linda Swanson. Lighting is the sole responsibility of Pat Hughes. As House Manager, Laurie Benz will also be in charge of tickets. Make-up will be done by Vicki Pilgrim and Ray Montgomery.

"Roadrunners" to Meet

The "Roadrunners," a newly formed sports car club, will hold its first meeting next Tuesday, Oct. 22. Pete Kent, a sophomore from Glen Ellyn and instrumental in the formation of the club, said a constitution has been submitted and recognition is expected to be forthcoming.

Kent said he hopes the club will undertake such activities as sponsoring road rallies, gymkhanas, sports car clinics, and races. He hopes the club will be able to hold its first rally before winter and another during the winter, possibly on a frozen lake.

Membership in the club will be open to any student at College of DuPage who owns or has an interest in sports cars.

The organizational meeting will elect officers. The meeting will be held at Maryknoll in room 503 at 11:30 a.m. Interested students who cannot attend this meeting should call Pete Kent at 460-3991.

Faculty sponsor for the club is Gabriel Hellig, English instructor.

Although the final outcome of Friday's first home football game between the Chaparrals and The Air Force Cadets, 40-20, wasn't too auspicious, a night of dancing at the post-game mixer managed to wash away some of the bitter taste of defeat.

Is Ten Minutes Enough Time Between Classes?

By Joan Carlson

The allotted 10 minutes between classes is just not enough. Teachers as well as students are finding this painfully true. By the time a student leaves one building and fights his way through the traffic to the next, he is invariably late for class by five or 10 minutes. And to some, if not all, teachers this is quite aggravating as assignments and important matters have to be repeated two or three times.

A typical run between classes works something like this -

11:21 - prof finally excuses Greg W.'s math class and 19 animal - like people fight to exit the room.

11:23 - Greg makes the exhausting trip across the rolling acreage of Maryknoll to the parking lot.

11:24 - Collapses in car and makes a hasty exit from the parking lot.

11:25 - Greg and 15 other cars in front of him wait impatiently while an incompetent traffic officer makes the traffic pattern worse.

11:28 - finally able to turn right onto Rte. 53, Greg races under the bridge and makes the ridiculous turn through a residential section in order to eventually land on Roosevelt road. Left turns are a no-no here.

11:30 - late already, Greg waits again as a parking attendant figures out where he can park.

11:32 - Greg pulls in only to find a little VW in that large space - with a loss of patience, he drives around the lot hopelessly.

11:34 - Too desperate to care, he parks on an embankment which will, no doubt, warrant him a ticket later.

11:35 - runs from the car through the muddy lot to Glen Hill, almost run over by another desperate student.

11:39 - Greg walks into his Spanish class and is greeted with "Where have you been?"

All joking aside, is 10 minutes really enough?

By way of introduction, let us get to the point. Are you having trouble with your teachers? Don't they understand you? There is an art to conversing with a teacher and making one understand you in a favorable light. It's known as conning.

Oh, there are other names for it that are not gross enough to mention here. And that's what this column will deal with. The various arts. But moving again farther from the point, to a catharsis to speak, or maybe a stalemate, there are many fine points to be considered in conning one's prof. First, get on his/her good side at once. It helps to have a friend who can fill you in on all his/her likes and dislikes.

Discover their pet topics of discussion, their pet peeves. Invite him out for coffee after class. Discuss world affairs or his leaky plumbing or what he will. Thus, Lesson 1. By maintaining good speaking terms with them they are hard put to flunk you.

Class participation is important (however, not from the standpoint of learning). Ideally, class lectures are designed to cover necessary education material. These may tend to be dull. Never avoid controversy. Always choose a topic about which everyone will have something to say. After instigating discussion, you can return to your reading of 10-cent novels or catch 40 winks.

Thus, Lesson II. A good controversial discussion can easily use up a 50-minute period.

Work assigned for outside of class, such as reports and outside reading, is a pain.

Invariably we students are forced (because of all the demands made on us) to wait until the last minute to begin these outside assignments. When this happens and you come to class the next day unprepared (only because of the grossly unfair time limit placed on the assignment), STALL. . . Ask a question. It need not pertain to the subject. It can deal with his/her in-laws or something equally important.

Thus, Lesson III. A question of irrelevance may save you embarrassment.

With our college spread out the way it is, car trouble is always a valid excuse for being tardy (although somewhat over-used). For illness, try something worse than polio and a little less than death. A Christmas card works wonders.

This week's discussion was on the art of conning a professor. Next, I'll talk about writing and how to con the entire student body, that is, if my instructor doesn't catch me first.

(Opinions expressed in editorials are not necessarily those of the College of DuPage or of the student body.)

C of D: What's That?

Glen Ellyn, 10:42 a.m. The sky is blue, the temperature is 71 degrees. The ad man for the College of DuPage pokes his head through a door and then strides confidently into the store. He walks briskly up to a small standing behind the counter and makes his pitch.

"How do you do, sir. I'm from the College of DuPage and I was wondering if. . .

"From where?"

"The College of DuPage."

"Where's that?"

Lombard, 11:45. Once again the sky is blue. The temperature has risen to 76 degrees. Our ad man walks through the door, a questioning look in his eyes. Once again, after locating the manager, he makes his pitch.

"Sir, I'm from the College of DuPage and I'd like to know if you're interested in putting an ad in our school paper?"

"Sure would, son. But only because the college is right here in Lombard."

Sound a little unbelievable? A little strange? A little shocking? A little true? It is.

The relation between the community and the College of DuPage has dwindled to a near nadir of what it should be. The only way the community, and this is a community college, is it not, knows about the college is by reading the local papers or driving on Rte. 53. There is an amazing lack of college-community relations as of this moment. Usually when a C of D student is asked where he goes to college, he ends up going into a detailed account of the various locations of the college. This should not be so.

But, what to do about it? It has been proposed by one student political party at the school that an autonomous board be set up to spread the College's name throughout the community. Students could speak at women's functions, because we all know how women can spread an article of news around. A tremendous publicity campaign could be waged throughout the area informing the public of some of the many up-coming events at the College of DuPage. Publicity does not involve purely news-releases and posters on walls of buildings. Let's not worry about selling bonds; about the traffic problems. Before a person can judge a school he must know the school exists. Before a person can complain about the liberal aspects of an institution, he must first know that that institution exists. Before a person can send his kids to a college, he must first know that the college exists. -- Scott Betts.

Pass-Fail Perils

Recently, a petition requesting that the College of DuPage switch from a grade point system to a pass-fail system was presented to John Paris, dean of students. Those persons who filed the petition are justified in doing so, as it is their legal right. But, one must look carefully at the facts before taking such a drastic step as adopting a pass-fail system.

This is not a four-year college. Despite the objections of the administration, it can be said that the junior college system is primarily a farm system for four year schools. That is, college students attend junior colleges mainly to prepare for a four year college or to see if they have the ability to make it through college. In a senior institution, the pass and fail system might work and is, in fact, according to many administrative personnel, the system of the future. But in a junior college? No.

There are three main reasons for the case against the pass and fail system. First, and most obvious, is the fact that the four-year schools admit junior college students on the basis of their grade point average. If the co-operation of every senior college in the nation could be counted on, that is if every school went to a pass-fail arrangement, then such a system in the College of DuPage would be fine. But, until then. . .

Second is the draft. College students are usually drafted when their grade point drops below 2.0 (C) or when they drop or are dropped from the college. With a pass-fail system, the whole drafting procedure would have to be revised and, after all, who wants to knock a bad thing?

Third, and this is psychological rather than basic fact, the average junior college student would have trouble with his first two years of college with a pass-fail system because the student would not know what progress he was making until he was dropped from the college or patted on the back by his local draft board.

Although the pass-fail system probably will not be instituted into the College of DuPage for some time, if ever, it might be advisable if the administration kept the idea in mind. Otherwise, when the pass-fail system does become nationally popular, the College of DuPage could be stranded on the shore while the river rushes by. -- Scott Betts.

Dear Editor,

In order to clarify some of the controversial impressions concerning last Friday night's football game, we would like to present a few facts about our squad in relation to that particular game, the students and the administration.

Anyone who attended the game against Air Force witnessed the halftime farce at our expense. After the clock ran out we were announced over the public address system and prepared to perform to an album played at the speed of 45RPM. But this could not compare with the final humiliation we experienced. While still in formation on the field, we received jeers from OUR team and heard an order to "Get those broads off the field" from Coach Miller, who could have just as easily approached us with common courtesy.

What did we do to deserve this treatment? We practice at least 13 hours a week, have attended every football game this season, publicized them, cheered for empty stands, worn our uniforms to classes, all of which met only with hostility and mockery. We marched in parades to represent our school, and performed countless other services, all accomplished without a sponsor.

Contrary to what it may seem, we want no sympathy; but as every other school activity, we need cooperation, strong school support, and recognition, all of which we have received little or none. The spirit of any college relies on involvement of the students in every activity. We would especially like to point this out to those of you who are apathetic, students and faculty included.

We'll be at the game Saturday. How about you?

THE POM PON SQUAD

Editorial Comment . . .

It was half-time at the College of DuPage-Air Force football game. A record crowd was in attendance. Many members of the faculty, administration, and even the board of trustees were there. The student cheering section had almost yelled itself hoarse supporting and, hopefully, inspiring the team. The Pom-Pon squad had led cheers throughout the first half - a job which wasn't even theirs, but which they had performed since we have no cheerleaders. Many of the girls' parents were there also. It was Parent's Night and along with the parents of the football players who had come to see their sons play, the parents of the girls had come to see them perform.

They were now about to realize the fruits of their labor. Their many weeks of practice would mean something. They were good, and they knew it. They had their routines down pat. Their parents would be proud. The students would be proud. The team would know that they weren't the only ones who went out of their way for the school.

At the end of the half, everything looked good. School spirit was at a high point. Officials of student government were ecstatic because of the interest taken in the game. There was not the slightest hint of apathy.

Then it happened. The Pom-Pon girls were supposed to perform first. Instead, the Velvet Vikings, a drum and bugle corps from Lombard, were announced. All right, the girls would go on next.

Next never came!

The girls took their places on the field awaiting their music. It began on the wrong speed. Try again. Still the wrong speed! OK, that's the right speed, but you can't start in the middle of the song. Once more, let's try it again. Nope, still wrong. Meanwhile the teams have returned to the field. The girls are now very nervous. The music is still not right! Their routines are worked out to the exact beat of the music. If it isn't right, they will all be in the wrong positions for their formations.

Listen! What is that the coach is saying? "Get those broads off the field!" Some of the players are saying worse.

Exit Pom-Pon girls - some in tears, some in anger. "But we're out there for them, for our team." Enter (for the girls) humiliation, disillusionment, broken spirits. For the people in the stands - disbelief, anger, resentment, especially among the students. They came to see the girls in addition to the game. Many of them had seen the time and effort the girls put into their work. They had seen them practicing at the Student Center before classes, after classes, evenings. The students yelled "We want the Pom-Pon girls". It was in vain. Their alternative was to perform after the game. No, they would not perform - now now, not after the game. They who added color to the games. They who created school spirit. They were at the games, even when the students and parents weren't.

But because of a lack of appreciation, because of an attitude of unimportance by those very people the girls made sacrifices for, future games might be lacking that extra quality they brought to it. T. Dennis O'Sullivan.

Letters To The Editor

To Whom it May Concern,

For those C of D students who are wondering why a charge of $1.00 was made at the past Friday night mixer, here is an attempt to explain what happened, and what will possibly happen in the future when such events take place.

College of DuPage events are either scheduled or not scheduled; they either have funds appropriated or don't to cover the total costs. The Friday night mixer was scheduled but funds were not appropriated. The Student Government, mainly the executive board, paid for this event out of their own appropriations fund and found it necessary to operate the event on a break-even basis. In other words, a $1.00 charge was made at the door to cover the cost of a band and the rental of the facility. Let me know if you have any questions.

Don Preston,
C of D Comptroller

To The Editor:

We, the C.O.D. Y.R.'s, in keeping with our policy of doing the utmost for the betterment of the College of DuPage, and the associated student body of the College of DuPage, do hereby endorse the senatorial candidates running for office on the ticket of the Students for United Government. We pledge our full support to these candidates in their quest for these important offices. We further endorse these candidates with our complete trust that they will protect the rights and privileges of the A.S.B. of C.O.D. for the coming quarters.

Mrs. Dunnington Joins McCarthy Committee

Mrs. Doris Dunnington, of the IRC, has joined the Illinois McCarthy Committee, which associates with those of McCarthy, Kennedy, Rockefeller and McGovern organizations throughout the country.

Mrs. Dunnington said she is not trying to organize a students for McCarthy committee at C of D, but she is willing to discuss the matter with any interested students.

"We became a constituency of Conscience to pursue the politics of morality rather than patronage and personalities; to end the war in Viet Nam; to eliminate poverty and racism in the U.S.; to restore order based on justice; and to eliminate the 'feudal system' in Illinois", states the committee. The McCarthy people are sure these goals can and will be achieved.

Glen Briar Becomes New Student Center

By Ray Montgomery

Nestled in a little valley adjacent to the junction of Butterfield Rd. and Rte. 53 lies a cozy little swim club.

Complete with pool, tennis courts, picnic grounds and volleyball and basketball courts, it is surrounded by trees and shrubbery which give the grounds the air of an exclusive country club.

This is the Student Center, Glen Briar.

The Student Center last year was located on North Ave. and was not well used because of its location. Those who made good use of it had a ball! This year the new center serves many purposes.

Some students know the center as a classroom. Several music classes and journalism classes meet there.

The center also houses the Student Government offices and The Courier offices. (Actually, a series of converted locker room with shower stalls serving as offices and dark rooms through which sheep wandered until an extensive remodeling began last week.)

The snack-bar is in full operation and is staffed by students with an adult supervisor. The food is good and inexpensive.

The center is open until 10 p.m. Monday through Thursdays and gets a good play in the evening because of colored television.

Aside from being a good place to study or for clubs to meet, it's also a good place just to come and watch the crowds flow in and out.

Ernest LeDuc, director of student activities, is also there directing student activities. Marie O'Toole, his secretary, has her desk by the door. It's hard to see her there behind all those students, but she's there.

For the country set the student Center offers two sheep, eight chickens, two ducks, three horses, two rabbits, three ponies, and two geese that attack with malice and dark rooms through which sheep wandered until an extensive remodeling began last week.)

All these animals have a mind of their own and college life doesn't disturb them at all. When you come to the Center, ask someone about the day the sheep came into the Center and sat down to watch the Bears' game. Or the time the geese attacked the grillmen preparing lunch for freshman orientation. Or the migration of the salamanders.

True to the "something for everyone" policy, Lucille Friedli has a standing offer to drag her Camaro against all comers.

The Center is also a good place for teachers and students to get together to discuss grades, term papers and other mundane topics meriting talk outside the classroom.

If you come to see the Pom Pon girls, or the Ping Pong games or just to see, whatever the reason, if you can find a parking place, it's well worth the effort.

Negotiation Is The Only Way: Simon

State Sen. Paul Simon Talks to YDs

The College of DuPage Young Democrats club presented State Senator Paul Simon, candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket in Illinois, as a speaker before a small crowd at the C of D's student center Friday, Oct. 11.

Simon, who no doubt did not anticipate a large Democratic turnout at the speaking engagement, fenced verbally with several of the score of Young Republicans present. The YR's appeared, at first, to be out to antagonize Simon with such accusations to the effect that the Democratic Party was nothing more than a communist state and that Mayor Daley maneuvered Gov. Shapiro while Shapiro ran the governor's office.

The verbal swordplay demonstrated by Simon in managing to answer the questions without incurring any resentment of the YR questioners was a big plus in his favor.

Coffeehouse Makes It Friday

If you come to the Student Center Friday night, and it looks like a sit - in demonstration, don't be alarmed. It's only the College of DuPage coffeehouse.

The C of D student center will take on all the aspects of a coffeehouse. Everything from people on the floor to W. C. Fields will be present. Live entertainment will be provided by the Loved Ones and Andy Mullaney, from The Pheasant Run.

Everything from blues to folk to protest will be put to music. The last hour will be given to C of D students who wish to do their own thing. Anything from skits to, well anything, will be presented at this time.

W. C. Fields and Laurel and Hardy will be present in two films. And if that isn't enough to bring you out, there will also be free refreshments.

That's at 8 p.m. Friday. They might even let you sing.

GERMAN CLUB TO MEET

The German Club of College of DuPage will hold its first organizational meeting Wednesday, Oct. 23, in the Student Center, Bruce Lamb, German Club president, announced.

All students interested are invited to attend.

Simon showed courage in appearing in such a conservatively Republican area as DuPage County. When answering a question he somehow managed to get off the main track to some subject related to his campaign. He spoke for only a few minutes before accepting questions.

Simon, who voted for the minority plank at the Democratic convention, made numerous references to the fact that welfare money was being distributed to people who did not know what to do with it. He also said that the welfare system in Illinois should be fully revised.

On the subject of the Vietnamese war, Simon said, "A traditional type of military victory is not possible in Viet Nam. Negotiation is the only way."

Simon also pointed out the fact that we are not only fighting a war against the North Vietnamese but that North and South Viet Nam are engaged in a civil war.

An anti-climatic end to Simon's speaking engagement came when he left the student center. As he walked out into the parking lot he glanced up at the huge sign above the Student Center door which read "WELCOME SENATOR SIMON". Below the sign was a small poster which said "NIXON".

C of D Board Sells $4 Million in Bonds to Harris Trust

The Board of College of DuPage has voted unanimously to sell $4 million in general obligation bonds to an investment group headed by the Harris Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago.

Harris Trust & Savings, with an effective interest rate bid of 4.5178%, was the lowest of four sealed bids presented to the Board by William J. Seiple of the Illinois School Consulting Service. The 4.5178% effective interest rate means a net interest charge to the College district of $2,293,531.

When the public, in May of 1967, authorized the sale of $10 million in bonds to purchase a site and construct a permanent campus for College of DuPage, it was assured by the Board that the tax rate to retire the bonds would not exceed 3.4¢ per $100 of assessed valuation. This sale, like the previous sale of $3 million in bonds on Oct. 19, 1967, is well within the 3.4¢ retirement rate.

Other members of the group headed by Harris Trust & Savings are First National Bank of Chicago, A.G. Becker, Barcus, Kindred & Co., Iowa - Des Moines National Bank, and Becker & Cowrie, Inc.

Maryknoll Keeps Pace

To most College of DuPage students from public high schools the mere mention of the name Maryknoll brings to mind several questions such as: What is it? Who goes there? Why go there?

To begin with the full name of the place is Maryknoll College Seminary. It is a four-year college run by the Maryknoll Fathers, a Roman Catholic missionary society. The students enrolled are all boarding seminarians.

About 175 of the students are studying for the Maryknoll priesthood while the remaining are Scalabrini and Glen Mary seminarians with several Maryknoll Brothers. Almost all Maryknoll seminarians go through here at one point in their vocational education. After college they attend four years of theology and one year in the novitiate. From there: ordination and a mission assignment.

According to Pete Frenye, Maryknoll seminarian, the students do more than pray all day, in fact that is only a minor part of their daily routine. The curriculum is like that of any other college with the exception that one theology course per semester is required. The student body is quite active with several Peace and Human Relations groups, not to mention sports and other clubs and organizations.

The general attitude of the Maryknoll seminarians to the College of DuPage students is excellent. "It's good to have a change in the scenery around here," says Frenye.

The seminarians, however, feel that more contact with C of D students could be beneficial on both sides. Some of the ways that this could be done would be to have joint organizations and activities. Several of the seminarians have come up with ideas on clubs with active participation in human relations and politics. Any response to these ideas would be welcomed by the seminarians as a positive link between the two institutions.

The scholarship was awarded on the basis of scholarship, background, and need. Winners were chosen by a panel of a half dozen experts.

Air Force JV's Bomb Chaparrals 40-20

In their first home game of this season, the College of DuPage Chaparrals were shot down by the Air Force Academy Junior Varsity, 40-20. Although the Roadrunners lost, they proved they are a fine football team.

In a game that featured the hardest hitting of the season, the Chaparrals looked very aggressive from the first play of the game until the last when they scored a touchdown with only one second remaining. The Roadrunners were not kicked out of the stadium at West Chicago as some people had predicted; but if it hadn't been for two fumbles and an intercepted pass, DuPage probably would have been the victors.

The Roadrunners started out quickly by marching 69 yards in nine plays and scored when DuPage quarterback Mike Wallace threw a 36 yard touchdown pass to end Lee Weems. The point after was kicked by Mario Corona and with 10:51 left to play in the first quarter, DuPage led 7-0.

But the Falcons came right back and in five plays after receiving the kickoff they had six points on the board. Halfback Mike Dunn ran 51 yards over left tackle for the Air Force's first score of the night. The conversion was good and with 8:36 left in the quarter the game was knotted at 7-7.

It appeared as if the Air Force score had no effect on the DuPage offense as they once more marched deep into Falcon territory. But then the first of three costly errors occurred. On a first and ten play from the Air Force 13 the members of the DuPage backfield got their signals crossed and a fumble resulted. Wallace turned to hand off and found not one but two backs going for the same hand off. The ball fell to the ground and Dick Smithwick recovered it for the Falcons. However, the Chaparral defense took hold and the Air Force eleven ended up punting from their own goal line.

At the end of the first quarter the score was 7-7 but in the second quarter the Air Force broke the game open with two scores in four minutes.

The second Air Force tally came with 4:12 left to play in the first half when Mike Dunn sprinted into the endzone from three yards out to cap a 63 yard scoring drive. Dan Dougherty tried for the extra point but missed.

The Air Force scored again with only 39 seconds remaining in the half when halfback Dougherty went over the middle for three yards and another Falcon score. The extra point was made and at the half Air Force led the Chaparrals 20-7.

As for our halftime activities, or should I say festivities, two things can be said; somebody better learn to play a phonograph or get a pair of glasses. But it is rumored that that somebody already wears glasses and, elevator, elevator, we got the shaft!

In the second half things started out as bad as they had ended in the first half. Air Force received the DuPage kickoff and eight plays later they scored when Falcon quarterback Bob Parker hit halfback Bob McKinney, who was all by himself in the endzone. The extra point was good and with 11:34 left in the third quarter, Air Force led 27-7.

The Falcons tallied again when Dave Markellos picked off a Wallace pass on the Air Force 27. The first play from scrimmage resulted in six points when Falcon quarterback John Dobbs raced around right end for the touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, the Falcons scored again with 4:30 remaining in the game. Mike Relley teamed up with end Mike Lyga for a 62 yard touchdown pass play. However, aside from this score, the Roadrunner defense held the Falcon offense in check. The Chaparrals then went to work and scored twice. Ralph Norman scored the Roadrunner's first touchdown of the quarter when he went seven yards over right guard, but the extra point was wide.

DuPage scored again with one second left to play when quarterback "Chic" Hansen ran the ball over on a quarterback sneak. The final score was Air Force 40 and DuPage 20.

Chaparral of the Game

Halfback Ralph Norman and quarterback Charles "Chic" Hansen were chosen players of the game after the coaches had viewed films of the College of DuPage - Air Force football game. Hansen directed two of the Chaparral's scoring drives and had the Roadrunners deep in Falcon territory numerous times during the contest. Hansen is from Villa Park and is a graduate of Willowbrook High School.

Ralph Norman, who was DuPage's leading ground gainer last year, is a graduate of Downers Grove South High School. Norman carried the ball 16 times in the Air Force game and gained a net of 108 yards rushing for an average of 6.7 yards per carry. Norman also scored a touchdown and was on the receiving end of two passes that went for a total of 21 yards. In the Air Force game, Norman also played defensive back and prevented two Air Force touchdowns.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

By Mike Mullen

Intramural golf and tennis at College of DuPage is in full swing as play enters the third week. Golf is played at Glen Briar every Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday. C of D students must register at the club house on the intramural registration form and then play. Tennis is held at Glen Briar Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12:30 on the courts.

In golf play last week, some of the top scores were: Dave Kielma, Bensenville, 36; and Ted Praznowski, Roselle, 42.

In tennis matches last week, Mike Legler beat Bill Fitzgerald and Wayne Fletcher. Vic Uss defeated Tom Immorino, and Ron Rose beat John Cleavenger. John Pingle won his first match by edging Mike Favia. Mike Legler is now 5-0 to take the lead in the tournament.

You are still able to compete in these sports as they run until November 1.

The intramural program at C of D was one of the college's most successful endeavors last year. So successful, in fact, that Herb Salberg, the program's director, was asked to lecture before a statewide clinic for intramurals at the junior college level. According to Salberg, over 400 people took part in the intramural program last year, making it the most successful in the state.

Why was this program so successful? Possibly because the college was able to get its own facilities. This college was the only one in the state with its own golf course, its own tennis courts, and its own handball courts. Another reason is that the college had a full time program for each sport. Most other schools run intramurals on a "day" plan. One day for fall sports, a day for winter sports and so on. The students wanted a good program and they got the best in the state.

But, just having the facilities isn't enough. The students have to be there to use them. Participation this year is roughly a little behind the level of last year, and this year there are twice as many students. It is true that some people hold jobs and just don't have the time, but there must be more than 70 people who like to play golf in a school of over 4,000. Get together with your friends and play golf or form a basketball or bowling team, but do something for the school that is doing so much for you.

Golfers Lose

The College of DuPage golf squad suffered its first loss of the season at the hands of Danville Junior College, 316 to 321. Low scorer for the Roadrunners was Doug Pinns with a 77. Other placers for the Chaparrals were Bob Souza 85, John Green, 82, and Bill Fritz, 77.

Golf coach, Herb Salberg, attributed the defeat to the fact that the Chaparrals were playing on a short nine hole course and didn't have a chance to take advantage of their long tee shots. The next College of DuPage golf match is today against Joliet, Rock Valley, and Black Hawk at Black Hawk.

Mario Corona confers with DuPage coach Dick Miller.

WAA Formed

On Oct. 10, the Women's Athletic Association (WAA) of the College of DuPage held its first meeting at the Glen Ellyn YMCA. A temporary board was set up for organizational purposes. The second meeting was last Tuesday and plans are now being drawn up for future recreational sports. If any girl is interested in joining WAA, contact Lynette Pierdinock 834-6570, Jan Luma 968-7186, Vicke Bergman 668-7767 or Karen Pedersen 469-1146.
