'Composer-in-residence' plan gets $1,000 state aid

College of DuPage has been granted $1,000 by the Illinois Bicentennial Commission to assist in the composer-in-residence program proposed by Dr. Carl Lambert, director of choral activities. The Student Activities Advisory Board is also assisting in the funding.

Randall Thompson, dean of American choral composers, has been invited to be on campus from May 29 through June 7, 1976. He will attend music classes where students will be able to receive the benefits of his long years as teacher, composer and conductor. Dr. Thompson will be 76 next year.

It is expected that he will be able to study the compositions of students in theory classes and comment on them.

He will put the finishing touches to the performance of his own "Testament of Freedom" which will be performed on Sunday evening, June 6, by the College of DuPage Community Chorus. He composed the music to the words of Thomas Jefferson. Also included in the concert will be Howard Hanson's "Drum Taps," to words of Walt Whitman, and a recent composition by Daniel Pinkham, "An Emily Dickinson Mosaic."

Confused about learning?

By Michael Reedy

The Council of Colleges Tuesday discussed independent learning. Or was it individualized learning? Or was it developmental learning?

Anyway, for sure, a task force will study a model for an Independent Learning Center, according to Ted Tilton, vice-president of academic affairs.

The individual instruction review committee will determine assignment procedures, counseling practices and teacher and program evaluation. This may require a modified committee or task force to implement an action.

There was a suggestion the Developmental Learning Laboratory come under college status since it hires and assigns teachers. It was asked if Bev Bogaard, DLL director, should be made a dean.

The meeting, which taxed semantic credibility, also caused a flare-up between Bill Leppert, Alpha dean, and Carter Carroll, Omega dean, over standards of counseling quality.

Leppert said counseling is lousy and mentioned an onimous "report" he is sending to Springfield. When Carroll demanded proof of these allegations, Leppert strode out of the meeting, returned a few seconds later carrying a heavy file and dramatically slammed it down in front of Carroll.

"Here's your proof," he said.

But the council moved on to other business.

Need financial aid?

Did you know that you can still apply for '75-'76 financial aid?

Did you know:

1. There is still time to apply for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission Monetary Award for tuition and fees. The latest communique from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission states that 84 percent of all announced applicants in the '75-'76 program receive $$$ as compared to 79 percent for '74-'75. Historically, three out of four applicants at DuPage receive an award.

2. Half-time students (students enrolled 6 through 11 hours) may be eligible for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission Monetary Award, Basic Grant, and Illinois Guaranteed Loan Program.

3. Students seeking on-campus student employment should make appointments to see Mr. Schiesz in the Student Financial Aid Office the last of August or the first of September to discuss possible employment.

4. The most common errors in filling out financial aid application forms are:

a) Including cents instead of rounding to the nearest dollar, making a $4,900.49 income a $59,000 as computer is programmed to accept only five whole numbers. b) Applications are incomplete. c) Applications not signed by student and parents or spouse. d) Incorrect base year income data given. Illinois State Scholarship Commission requires 1973 income (file special circumstances form if family situation has greatly changed since then). Basic Grant and ACT ask for 1974 income.

5. If you have problems or questions concerning financial aid at College of DuPage, hurry to the Student Financial Aid Office, K149, for the answers. The office is open 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Bookstore finds new home in N4

By Norma Johnson

The Bookstore has moved to a new location and will be needing more help. New hours have been scheduled for the Fall Term.

The new Bookstore is in N4, located near the west end of student parking for K Bldg. It is open for business.

Space was the main reason for the move. The old bookstore was 50 x 70 compared to 50 x 120 in the new one. Now there will be six checkouts instead of four. A wider selection of trade books such as dictionaries and reference books and more convenience items will be added to the thousands of books stocked by Vern Hendricks, Bookstore manager.

Under Hendricks' supervision, two new employes and the entire crew moved the old bookstore to the new location. They started two days before the bookstore closed — June 25 through July 7 — and hope to be completely finished in August.

Approximately 15 new employes will be hired, plus three part-time student receptionists. The new fall hours will be Monday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Hendricks says the store is considering individual book orders from students. They will need extra employes for this new project.

Passage of the bond issue will permit the Bookstore to move to its permanent building within five years.

Hendricks also noted in an interview that students can save 25 per cent by buying used books.

RTA weighs bus service to campus

By Cynthia Tyndall

Students wishing to combat rising gasoline prices should welcome the Regional Transit Authority's budget proposals for bus lines along Routes 53 and 83 to College of DuPage next year.

The buses would run along Routes 53 and 83 from the Downer's Grove and Wheaton train stations, announced CD Planning Director Robert Seaton. They would link the Burlington Northern and the Chicago Northwestern railroads to the college.

A proposal for a yearly $100 ticket is also under serious consideration by the RTA Board. Students would purchase the $100 ticket and pay an additional 10 cents for each ride.

The RTA Board held its budget meeting with the DuPage County Regional Planning Board on June 17 in Wheaton, according to Board member Maxine Hansen. Funds for the buses must be approved by the federal government and shared with the Chicago Transit Authority.

The DuPage County Board asked the RTA for a 90-day delay to further study the proposed routes. Their request was turned down because the proposed budget had to be in by June 30. The RTA is now awaiting approval of the budget, which includes the routes to College of DuPage.

There are shortcomings in the proposed bus lines, according to both the DuPage County Board and Dr. Seaton. The buses won't service students in the Naperville and Bensenville areas. They have to ride the train to Downer's Grove. Students from West Chicago must go to Wheaton to catch the bus. These students must allow for greater travel time and expense.

No survey to determine students' transportation needs has been conducted to date, but the DuPage County Board did take a ridership survey for all of DuPage County. The survey showed that DuPage college students come from many locations and work different hours. The buses and trains may not coincide with their work and class schedules. But with gasoline prices rising, students must find alternate forms of transportation.

President reassigns key posts

A reassignment of certain administrative people resulting from the vacancy in the vice president's position was proposed by President Rodney Berg to the Board and approved July 9.

Ted Tilton, currently dean of academic programs, has been named vice president-academic affairs, and will coordinate the management of the educational program.

Dick Petrizzo, now a special assistant to the president, will become vice president-operations. He will be in charge of the coordination of the management of operational functions.

The concept of the two positions has been described as similar to the 1971-'72 structure when there was a vice president-operations and a vice president-programs. The dual posts are an attempt to aid the president toward increased managerial effectiveness and better coordination of college interests. Also, it is an attempt to reduce administrative overhead.

Lon Gault has been named dean of instruction from assistant dean of instruction, and Bill Gooch is now dean of occupational programs, from assistant dean occupational programs. Each will have a stronger hand in the management of college affairs for their respective areas.

Ron Lemme, now an assistant to the director of planning and development (that job to be eliminated), was named administrative assistant to the president, and among his many duties, will aid the functioning of the planning and information activities.

All changes are to be effective immediately. The vice president's position that will not be occupied has been empty since John Paris resigned June 12.

Enroll 5,798 for summer

A head count of 5,798 students for this summer quarter has been announced by the Office of Records and Admissions. This is a 34 per cent increase over the enrollment for summer quarter 1974.

Returning students represent two-thirds of the total enrollment with a 46 per cent increase in full time equivalency. Some 2,753 students seek degrees and 3,045 are baccalaureate-orientated.

The five most common majors are Business, Marketing and Management with 501; Nursing and related health fields, 378; Science/Math, 269; Education, 253, and Accounting, 188. There are 1,983 students in general interest studies or undecided.

The average number of credit hours carried by full-time students is 14.35 and for part time students 5.41, and the average class size is 13.

There are 5,562 in-district students, 233 out of district and 3 out of state. Students attending day classes only total 2,189; night classes only, 2,824, and 785 attend day and night.

Finances still challenge, says board chairman

"To look at the facilities at College of DuPage, it's hard to believe 100,000 people have come here in the nine years of CD's existence. But people have always come before buildings at College of DuPage," says Dr. Ronald L. Miller, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

The passage of the $11 million bond issue is not going to alter this basic orientation to people's needs, he asserts.

"College of DuPage is a dynamic institution with an exciting growth potential," he says, "The old stereotype of the junior college as an extension of high school has given way to an array of educational and public service programs. The range and complexity of these programs are a reflection of the needs and interests of the citizens of District 502.

"The passage of the 11-million-dollar bond issue goes a long way to solving the space and facility problems associated with the college's rapid growth. However, the more difficult and basic challenge remains, to increase operating revenue. Students, through tuition and fees, are providing their fair share of revenue.

"The repeated failure of the citizens to approve increases in local tax revenue drives us more and more to depend upon state financing. The citizens have the right to expect that their tax dollars be spent wisely. I believe this is being done at the college. The college deserves stronger support from the taxpayer."

Miller, of Hinsdale, decries the isolation among private and public colleges.

"We operate largely apart from each other at a time when, because of the financial crunch affecting all of us, we should be drawing together. Tradition, perspectives on education and identities are standing in the way of coordination and cooperation.

"I would like to see College of DuPage intensify its efforts to overcome these barriers and to encourage joint activities that more effectively utilize resources and facilities. We really have little choice. The private and public colleges can tackle these accommodation problems voluntarily or be dragged into accommodation through centralized state education administration.

"The limited effectiveness of the present caucus system," he continues, "is of deep concern to me. The election of Board members is becoming increasingly vulnerable to the concerted efforts of special interest groups or to gradual politicalization along party lines."

To avoid either of these potentialities, Miller believes that the caucus should be reorganized to assure district-wide representation and participation, including the financial capability to support its candidates for election.

"It is no small task to make the caucus concept effective in a district containing over 712,000 residents spread over 397 square miles."

He believes there is a continuing need for the Board to review and appraise the performance of the college. This includes setting up procedures to evaluate the performance of the Board itself.

"One of the most interesting and positive things going on at the college now is the self-study by people from within the college. We need to supplement this self-evaluation with creditable external evaluation."

Dr. Miller suggests that the citizen advisory committees which have been extremely valuable in establishing programs also could be used more extensively for ongoing performance evaluation.

"Most people have acquired a skepticism concerning educational institutions," he observes, "We need to demonstrate that not only are the resources and facilities of the college being efficiently managed, but that our educational activities do in fact achieve the desired and intended results."

Dr. Miller is an associate professor of management, University of Illinois at Chicago Circle. He serves as a neutral consultant to the Japanese government. Miller, who holds a PhD in economics from the University of Pennsylvania, is directing a national research project funded by the Smithsonian Institution dealing with the study of collective bargaining in cultural institutions such as museums, symphony orchestras, legitimate theater and ballet companies. The 1975 graduating class at UICC voted him the outstanding teacher in the College of Business Administration.

Roosevelt offers 'scholar' awards

Roosevelt University in Chicago has additional scholar awards available to qualified community college graduates transferring for the '75-'76 academic year.

The awards will cover full tuition at Roosevelt University for students majoring in Liberal Arts and Sciences and Business. Consideration for these awards are based on both financial need and academic performance.

These scholarships can be worth in excess of $2,000 a year and are renewable based on maintenance of academic performance. Three College of DuPage students have already been accepted and have received scholarship awards.

A limited supply of applications is available in the Student Financial Aid Office, K149.

ALUMNI PICNIC

The third annual Alumni Picnic has been scheduled for Sunday, July 27, at Blackwell Forest Preserve, from 1 p.m. until dusk. Blackwell is located on Butterfield Road a quarter mile west on Winfield Road. Bring your own picnic lunch and the beverage of your choice.

student who excel in their academic studies and in their participation in college and community events.

Mrs. Jweid, 34, earned a straight A average while enrolled in the college's Interior Design Program. The mother of three children, she has been actively involved in scouts, PTA and women's clubs as well as serving on various committees in schools, churches and civic groups in Woodridge.

Her long-range goals include working as an interior designer with a firm specializing in commercial design. Eventually, she hopes to open her own commercial design firm.

Regnier, 51, earned a 3.96 grade point average out of a possible 4.0 in the area of Fire Science. He began attending College of DuPage in 1969, traveling 160 miles round trip for each class he took on campus. Over the past six years, he has driven more than 25,000 miles while obtaining his college education. The father of three children, Regnier has recently been promoted to Fire Chief in Kankakee, supervising more than 40 firemen.

He plans to continue his studies at Governor's State University and receive a Bachelor's Degree in Fire Administration.

Auto tech program opens

By Dawn Greenwood

The new Automotive Service Technology program opening this fall has been coordinated by Edward Owen for persons interested in starting or upgrading their knowledge.

There will be 13 basic courses in the automotive program which will apply toward an Associate in Applied Science degree. This fall six courses will be offered ranging from engine design and operation to suspension and brake systems.

The classes will often be split between A Bldg. and the DAVEA auto shop in Addison. Owen explained that the program may take up to three years before all the equipment is to be organized. DAVEA presently has the testing and repair equipment which the college will be using there in the evenings.

The service technology program would be, in addition to "hands-on" work, the study of managerial responsibilities required for service shop work. This would differ from the present automotive maintenance seminars offered, which have their emphasis on actual parts repair.

NAMED OUTSTANDING

Four educators from College of DuPage have been selected for inclusion in the 1975 edition of Outstanding Educators of America.

Chosen on the basis of their civic and professional achievements were James H. Williams, director of admissions and records; Paul Eldersveld, mathematics instructor; Lucia Sutton, English instructor; and David Brown, chemistry instructor.

Guidelines for selection include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service and professional recognition.

TEACHER RESIGNS

Nola Vanderakis, English teacher here since 1968, has resigned due to the birth of her second child. She will take up the duties of a full time wife and mother.

STUDENT DISTRIBUTION

Towns near College of DuPage supply most of the students for summer sessions, according to the Office of Admissions and Records.

Wheaton ranks highest with 605 students, following with Glen Ellyn, 569, Downers Grove, 502, Lombard, 466, and Naperville, 377.

Owens said that formerly students interested in automotive services had to travel to Triton or Waubensee Community Colleges to enroll.

One of the college objectives here in starting this program, said

Child Care Center offers 2 sessions

The Child Care Development Center will enroll children for the fall quarter for 2½-hour sessions, either in the morning starting at 9 or in the afternoon, starting at 1.

The program is for children from 3 to 5. Student volunteers assist two full-time professional staff members.

"By enrolling the child in a 2½-hour session," explained Mrs. Louise Beem, coordinator, "the child has a better opportunity to develop friendships with the other children as well as benefiting from planned educational activities."

No more than 22 children per session are accepted.

Registration for the fall session will begin July 21. Quarter fees range from $71 for two days a week to $136 for five days a week.

HONDA REPAIR SEMINAR

College of DuPage will offer a seminar covering the care and maintenance of Honda motorcycles including tuning and rebuilding an engine.

The seminar will meet on three consecutive Sundays beginning July 27. The sessions will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in A0023.

The cost of the seminar is $15 which covers all materials. Class size will be limited to the first 15 registrants. For registration information, call Alpha college at 858-2800, ext. 357.

MILITARY GRANTS

The Student Financial Aid Office announced that the Illinois State Military Scholarship was used in spring quarter by 1,639 students, 297 of whom were new veterans to the program. This generated a total of 17,472 credit hours for $174,720, which included $1,400 in matriculation fees.

The current unduplicated count is 2,198 veterans using this program for '74-'75 for an annual amount of approximately $520,000, which includes Summer Quarter '75. This is an increase from the actual amount for '73-'74 of $346,854.

Owen, was "to present to the community changes in technology, and show the important part cars play in today's economy."

There will be two internship programs for students.

Owen said in talking with automotive dealers and salesmen, he has found them eager for trained and qualified help of the nature coming from this program. Car manufacturers, Owen said, have expressed the need for people with some service management experience.

In the shops on campus, Owen plans to have one complete engine for every two students to completely disassemble, identify and rebuild. Already A Bldg. has five engines, and more electrical equipment is expected to arrive in the next few weeks.

Writes on alcoholism

Alcoholism, related to 50 per cent of all traffic accidents, and a debilitating source of agony to some 10 million persons in the United States, has met a staunch foe in the person of Ed Owen, manager of training for Inryco, a structural fabrication firm.

Finding that 10 per cent of the work force is affected — 5 per cent abusers and 5 per cent heavy users — Owen did some research and came up with two booklets — the Management Guide to Alcoholism and the Supervisor's Guide to Alcoholism.

The State of Illinois has modified the former and presented it to Gov. Dan Walker who has implemented it as an aid to the 116,000 state employees.

The Supervisor's Guide is available in an audio-visual presentation with 104 35mm color slides which explain the national problem.

Long having negative connotations similar to mental illness, alcoholism should be discussed openly as is cancer or heart disease, he said. Surpassing marijuana and hard drug addiction in its social effect, alcoholism is now considered a disease by insurance companies who are beginning to assume rehabilitative costs.

Having thousands of definitions, alcoholism is perhaps best defined as serious when its use begins to affect one's job and social life, he said. Not against social drinking per se, Owen makes his own wine at home.

Repertory theatre season opens July 29 with 4 plays

By Cynthia Tyndall

Two musical comedies will open a four-play series at the College of DuPage Repertory Theatre. Plays will run nightly, except Monday, from July 29 to Aug. 17.

"The Boy Friend," by Sandy Wilson, is a musical spoof of the Jazz Age. It opens July 29 and also plays Aug. 3, 6, 10, and 16.

The second musical comedy, "Little Mary Sunshine," by Rick Besoyan, pokes fun at the big screen musicals of the '30s. Opening July 30, it continues Aug. 2, 8, 13, and 17.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner," by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, is a comedy about a man who disrupts the life of a family after breaking his hip on their doorstep and moving in to recover. The production plays July 31, Aug. 5, 9, and 14.

The final play is a serious one and opens Aug. 1. "The Children's Hour," by Lillian Hellman, shows how devastating gossip can be. It will also appear Aug. 7, 12, and 15.

All performances will be in the Convocation Center. The curtain goes up at 8:15 p.m., except Sunday evenings when it rises at 7:15.

General admission tickets can be purchased for $2 on Friday and Saturday evenings and $1.50 for Sunday through Thursday night performances.

Season tickets can be purchased at reduced rates by contacting Richard Holgate, chairman of the Theatre Department, at 858-2800 ext. 536.

"The Boy Friend" describes Polly, a millionaire's daughter, who attends a fashionable finishing school. She falls in love with a delivery boy named Tony. He turns out to be the son of Lord and Lady Brookhurst.

This witty play spoofs the flapper era musicals. It became famous in London and hit Broadway in 1954.

The lead role of Polly is played by Robin Torgerson of LaGrange Park. Robin is a student at St. Olaf's College in Minnesota. Tony is played by Barry Stoltze of Naperville, who is known for his theatre work at College of DuPage. The director is B. F. Johnston.

"Little Mary Sunshine" is a new musical about an old operetta. Its deliberately corny songs and naive situations poke fun at the clichés in the musicals from our grandparents' time. This play was introduced in Greenwich Village, where it played for three years and received numerous awards.

Lynne Kindschi of Naperville will play Little Mary Sunshine. Lynne is a graduate of the American Conservatory, where she was a voice major. David Harney of Bolingbrook will play opposite her as Capt. "Big Jim" Warrington. Harney is noted for his theatre work at Wheaton College. It is directed by Craig Berger.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" describes Sheridan Whiteside, the young man who arrived on the Stanleys' doorstep for dinner and broke his hip. A busy six weeks followed while the Stanleys' living room was monopolized by the invalid and the strange people and objects that paraded through their home at that time.

Sheridan Whiteside will be played by Bob Jackson of Lombard. Jackson graduated from Illinois State University and has been actively involved in theatre at College of DuPage. Mrs. Stanley will be played by Angie Bewenga of Lisle. She is a teacher and a member of Four Lakes Drama Club. Mr. Stanley is Mike McNeal of Aurora. McNeal is also a veteran of College of DuPage performances. The director is James Collie.

The only serious play, "The Children's Hour," describes unfounded rumors started by a malicious youngster. The rumors concern two women who run a private girls' school.

The youngster's gossip precipitates an irreparable tragedy for the women. When the rumors are proven to be pure invention, the damage has already been done.

Linda Black of Wheaton will play Mary Tilford. Linda is a student at the Chicago Conservatory. Liz Soukup of Naperville will play Karen. Liz has already been in two other College of DuPage productions. Colleen Sessa of Clarendon Hills is to play Martha. Colleen has been involved in theatre at Illinois Benedictine College. The director is Jack Weisman.

Just east of A Bldg. —

Prairie grass to grow again

By Dawn Greenwood

A restoration of natural prairie has been started on two acres of land east of A Bldg, by Russell Kirt, biology instructor, and his Biology 199 and 299 classes.

Fourteen different species of prairie plants were planted June 5-6, covering one-third of an acre. Among them, the prairie dock, compass plant and big bluestem should grow 6 to 8 feet before summer is over. Others not as tall will be Indian grass, Northern dropseed and little bluestem.

The seeds, donated by Ray Schulenberg, of the Morton Arboretum, were hand-planted. Kirt says Schulenberg, who heads the Prairie Restoration Project at the Arboretum, has been a great help in the project here.

Weeding was done this week by Kirt and his students and will probably be done again in two to three weeks. Weeds will "choke" the young plants, some of which have not yet come up; but given three or four years, the prairie grasses will start to dominate.

In the fall, seeds will be gathered and kept for planting next spring, and the whole growing process will start over.

"The main concern," Kirt says, "is to get the ground properly tilled at the proper time." The clearing of the land this spring was difficult. It had not been worked on for many years and was full of rocks and weeds.

RAVINIA TRIP CANCELED

A trip to Ravinia, scheduled for Friday, July 25, to see Judy Collins, has been cancelled because of lack of student interest.

The plot now resembles a home vegetable garden with stakes at the end of straight rows, each 12 inches apart. Kirt hopes to have 50 or 60 types of prairie plants when finished. He believes in about five years, after all the planting is done, the land should start to resemble a prairie. In that time small mammals and birds typical of prairies will appear, though it will take many more years before a true "community" will be established.

The prairie will be a "reminder of the past," says Kirt, "a living museum . . . to give the people an idea of what the land looked like . . . a horticulture that we don't have anymore."

The prairie is one of three natural ecological systems common to this part of Illinois. The other two, fresh water ponds and deciduous forests, are also represented east of A Bldg. All three will be used for field study by general biology and ecology classes.

Kirt spends an average of 10 hours a week on the prairie, and the students six to seven. Kirt says his helpers from the special prairie classes and his general biology classes are very responsible, hard-working people.

The restoration of prairies has grown lately to a sizable movement with numerous groups around the country attempting to save patches of remaining prairie or to re-establish them on farmlands.

"It is a big thing in colleges today," says Kirt, "in Illinois especially. So much of Illinois was prairie, now it is destroyed by the plow and civilization."

Lynn Feely, a student working on the project, said she did not mind the amount of work involved because, "It's a little piece of nature, as basic as can be. It's the land."

Plastics Tech gets $1,000

The Chicago Chapter of the Society of Plastic Engineers (SPE) has donated $1,000 to College of DuPage to be used in the Plastics Technology program.

"We are very indebted to the members of the SPE for their interest and support of the college's plastics program," said Johnson. "The money will be used to purchase needed audio-visual material on plastics, which will be used not only in the classroom but also to acquaint high school students with the plastics field."

Faculty Wives elect K. Lemme

Mrs. Karin Lemme has been elected president of the College of DuPage Faculty Wives Organization.

Other officers are Mrs. Ann Kaltofen, vice-president; Mrs. Jan Walters, treasurer; and Mrs. Dagmar Petrizzo, corresponding secretary.

Athletic program ranks with nation's best; bats .715 in 12 sports

The athletic program at College of DuPage continues to prove itself to be among the best in the nation, as seven of the 12 men's sports finished either first or second in the state with three obtaining national ranking. Every team had a winning season, except for football, with the teams combining to have a winning percentage of .715, winning 146 of 204 contests.

The swimming team, behind All-American Kent Pearson from Glen Ellyn, had its best season in the college's nine-year history, going undefeated in nine dual meets and finishing fourth in the national tournament.

Pearson set a national record in the 500-yard freestyle as well as taking a first in the 200-yard freestyle. The sophomore also came in second in the 1,650-yard freestyle, despite breaking the National Junior College record by 15 seconds.

The gymnastic team had its best season record, defeating 23 teams and losing only twice. They placed fifth in the national tournament with freshman Scott Reid of Willowbrook setting a school record in the vaulting event.

The ice hockey team won their fifth consecutive state title, going all the way to the semi-finals of the national tournament before being stopped, finishing fourth in the nation.

The golf team continued its winning ways, taking its sixth straight conference title, and finished second in the state for the second year in a row. They finished with a season record of 10-0.

Both the cross country and the track teams finished second in the state tournaments under head coach Ron Ottoson. Ottoson was chosen "Coach of the Year" by the Illinois Community College Track Association.

The Chaparrals' baseball team rode a seven-game winning streak to the top of the conference at the end of the season to take their fourth consecutive conference title. DuPage was led by rightfielder Sam Taves from Glenbard West, who set for records hitting .384, including 12 doubles, six triples, and scoring 43 runs to help the team to a 26-13 season. Taves and first baseman Greg Schmidt from Addison Trail, who hit .382, were unanimous first team All-Conference selections. They were also chosen Most Valuable Players on the team.

The basketball team won 20 games for the fourth season in a row, posting a mark of 20-7. Forward Scott Daum of Naperville was a first-team All-Conference selection, scoring 12 points a game and averaging 11 rebounds.

The soccer team finished second in the state tournament, ending the season with a record of 8-6-1, including a 1-0 victory over University of Chicago. This was the first time in five years the Chaparrals have defeated their arch rivals.

The wrestling team started the season well, but injuries cut into the team, leaving only five healthy participants at the end of the season. They still managed to place second in the conference and fourth in the state, finishing with a 14-7 mark.

The tennis team was 13-7, with first singles player Lance Rockwell being selected as the conferences "Most Valuable Player."

The football team was also hard hit by injuries, with three different quarterbacks all seeing action during the season. The team had its worst season in four years, finishing 2-6-1. Nevertheless, cornerback Mike Contorno of Willowbrook was selected as an All-American, as he led the team with 10 interceptions and 53 tackles.

Ex-Tulane quarterback named new football coach

Fred Dempsey, National High School Catholic League Coach of the United States in 1966, is the new College of DuPage football coach.

He succeeds Dick Miller, who resigned after eight years.

A former quarterback from Tulane University, Dempsey has been for the past eight years the assistant coach and the assistant dean of students at Lake Park High School. He will keep the position of assistant dean of students along with his coaching job here.

In Chicago he was coach for St. Patricks High School for 11 years, where he inherited a poor program but eventually developed teams that were undefeated for four years in the Catholic League. He also taught at Weber High School, Tafts High School, and Loyola Academy in Chicago.

Even though they were a little late in getting started, Dempsey and his assistant coach, Joe Roman, also from Lake Park High School, have worked hard at recruiting players for this season. They are still contacting players. More players have come out this year than last, with more students coming in to talk to the coaches. The team is expected to be competitive.

Dempsey, a graduate of Tulane University, was also an officer of the security air material command in the U.S. Air Force.

Dr. Palmieri, director of athletics, says that Coach Dempsey is a well known and highly respected man with extreme empathy for students and a knowledge of how to work with them.

The first official day of football practice will be Aug. 21 at Lewis Law University. Equipment will be handed out Aug. 18, 19, and 20, also at Lewis University.

Erlenborn and Title IX

By Rep. John N. Erlenborn

Ours is still a government of laws, not of men. That was one lesson of Watergate, a lesson brought home anew to me in the weeks since June 4. On that date, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) announced the long-awaited regulations generated by title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

In brief, title IX forbids sex discrimination in educational programs or activities which receive federal funds. The price for breaking this law is the loss of federal funds.

As with any other federal regulations, the purpose of the title IX regulations is to aid in enforcing the law. They supply the details intended, but not spelled out, by the law. As with any other federal regulations, they are supposed to be consistent with the law; they are not supposed to go beyond it.

In anticipation that title IX regulations would be lengthy (and they are) and involved (and they are), the Education Amendments of 1972 included an unusual provision: Congress, by resolution, could disapprove those sections of the regulations that proved to be inconsistent with the law.

With that concern in mind, shortly after the regulations were published, Congressman James O'Hara, D-Mich., called for hearings. He is Chairman of the Postsecondary Education Subcommittee which had a hand in writing title IX and on which I serve. The question for which we were seeking answers was: Did the regulations reflect the intent of title IX?

Almost without exception, the witnesses at our hearings reported their concurrence with the purpose of the law: To foster equal educational opportunities for boys and girls, for men and women. That is a goal I support, and with which few find fault.

Most people would agree also that educational institutions probably (as the regulations require) ought to perform self-evaluations to be sure they are not discriminating. That is, schools probably should keep records, for example, about enrollments by sex in various courses. Such data would help them to know they are making progress in fostering equal educational opportunities.

Similarly, few, if any, would argue against the idea of a school establishing (as the regulations require) internal procedures for handling charges of sex discrimination.

The issue, however, is not whether such goals are desirable. Rather, the issue is: Did the 1972 law (title IX) give HEW the authority to require self-evaluation? To require grievance procedures? Chairman O'Hara, nine other members of the Subcommittee and I say, No, it did not. We have joined, therefore, in a resolution to reject those two parts and a third section of the title IX regulations as being inconsistent with the law itself.

The third section of our resolution says that the 1972 law did not contemplate giving the Secretary of HEW authority to decide whether a school should be exempt on religious grounds. The law clearly exempts religious schools.

How does all this remind me of Watergate? Those who endorse the regulations in their entirety usually admit the regulations have faults; but, they say, approve them anyway. In other words, the message seems to be that the end justifies the means.

That was the excuse some people gave for Watergate.

Grid camp opens Aug. 4

A pre-season conditioning camp for all high school seniors and college students interested in football will be held Aug. 4-18, sponsored by College of DuPage Athletic Department. Joe Roman will be coordinator.

To help accommodate local working students the practice will be held evenings from 7:30 to 9 in the gymnasium and athletic fields.

Participants are required to bring on Aug. 4 their own locks, towels, athletic gear and evidence of having passed a medical examination since Sept. 1, 1974.

Physical examinations may be taken Wednesday, July 30, in the College Health Service in 2H, A Bldg., between 3 and 8 p.m. There is a fee. For an appointment, call Valiere Burke, college nurse, at 858-2800 Ext. 755.
