Two hour executive session held

Board reviews Zuck trip - again

By JoAnn Westrate

The College of DuPage Board of Trustees spent more than two hours in executive session Wednesday night.

The discussion pertained to the student grievance filed by student comptroller Dan Biederman last spring. The grievance stated that Ted Zuck, director of Campus Services, had not fulfilled his duties as back-up adviser during the student activities sponsored trip to Daytona, Florida. Zuck had obtained transportation as a back-up adviser.

Biederman had suggested that Zuck be required to reimburse the student account for expenses incurred during the trip. He also recommended that the selection of advisers and back-up advisers be less arbitrary.

The recommendation considered in the closed session by the board Wednesday night was the same one presented to it in June by Dr. Rodney Berg, college president.

In his recommendation, Berg said, "Mr. Zuck is not in violation of any policy established by the board and has not expended college or public funds. Therefore, he cannot be asked to reimburse the student activities account."

Considerable discussion followed when the meeting reconvened. Trustees were in disagreement as to how to treat Dr. Berg's recommendations. There was a consensus, however, that there is a need to formulate guidelines that would make adviser selection processes clearer.

Mention also was made of "new facts that had come to light" during the executive session. These "new facts" were not made public.

The board voted, 4-3, to accept the recommendation Berg had made contingent upon approval of a policy to be formed that will handle this problem in the future. Trustees Rollin Taecker, Anthony Berardi and Dr. Ronald Miller, board chairman, cast dissenting votes.

Prior to the executive session, there was a public hearing held on the proposed 1977-78 budget. The proposal was presented by Robert Thomas, budget officer. Later in the meeting, the budget was approved by the board unanimously.

The budget is balanced, calling for revenues of $15,445,000 to cover expenditures of the same amount. Last year's unaudited revenues were reported as $14,816,338, with expenditures totalling $13,941,406. Ken Kolbet, comptroller, stated that some additional expenditures were forthcoming to be charged to fiscal 1976-77.

The cost per student has increased considerably, according to Thomas' report. Compared with a full-time equivalency enrollment of 8,250 during 1976-77 at a cost per student of $1,690, the 1977-78 projections call for 8,600 full-time equivalency students at a cost per student of $1,780.

In other action, the board approved three instructors for the professional staff, all to be given three-quarter appointments. Phoebe Amago was assigned to Sigma College as an instructor of nursing. Frank Asta was assigned to Kappa College as an instructor of data processing. Paul Fina was assigned to Delta College as an instructor of plastics technology.

Groszos prepares for CD's next 35 years

Lack of ability to predict enrollment accurately has led to many problems in west suburban school districts.

Dr. Stephen Groszos, director of institutional research at College of DuPage, doesn't claim to have all the answers to predicting enrollment, but his recent demographic study of the college district is part of the college's effort to be ready for enrollment problems before they become crises.

Combining this with the data received from the DuPage County Regional Planning Commission and the North-eastern Illinois Planning Commission, Groszos determined the population of the district to be 684,493 in 1975. According to projections, this should grow to 961,000 by 1990, 1.1 million by the year 2000 and 1.3 million in 2010, the year planners estimate growth in the area served by the college to level off.

"We must be aware of the heavy population growth in what will be the larger municipalities," Groszos said. His report cites Naperville, Downers Grove, Wheaton, Lombard and Elmhurst as the top five of the district's 35 identifiable municipalities. This ranking is according to population projections for 2010.

In addition, Groszos studied the enrollments of elementary and high schools in the district. His study determined that the district is only four years away from declining numbers of high school graduates.

"We will have the decline beginning with the 1981 and 1982 high school graduation classes," Groszos said. In 1976, the number of high school graduates was approximately equal to the number of 8th-grade students. With expected attrition,

Interim campus renovation -

Doorways to be remodeled, LRC and fine arts to expand

J and K Bldgs. will have remodeled, better-constructed entryways; the LRC and the assorted fine arts departments will expand and remodel in order to take over virtually all of J and M Bldgs., respectively; and CD's entire heating and air conditioning system may have to be reworked and/or replaced in the near future. All of this is according to Ted Zuck, director of Campus Services, and the man at CD most directly responsible for the changes.

The covered entryway connecting J and K Bldgs. has, for the past few weeks, been ripped up by workmen. The ultimate goal, at a cost of $165,000, will include "closing the link (between the buildings) except for a space large enough for walking, but not for vehicles," said Zuck.

Also, the remaining doors of J and K (except for the southwest corners of each) will be remodeled - "recessed, similar to M Bldg.," said Zuck. Those doors in J and K now open onto the asphalt sidewalk, whereas the M doors are set back into the building, and open onto concrete.

"The concrete eliminates heaving (caused by weather changes), and the different design provides wider and heavier door frames," said Zuck.

Zuck could not estimate when the work would be done. "They were scheduled to start pouring concrete today (Monday)," he said, but rain halted those plans. "The contractor estimated finishing in six months, but I'm a little more optimistic."

Until permanent buildings are built, plans now call for the LRC to eventually take over all of J Bldg., but according to Zuck, it already has over 75 per cent of the building anyway. The same will hold true for Performing Arts. M Bldg. is being remodeled so that all the fine arts can be housed there, along with an expanded Performing Arts area.

The Convocation Center is in for quite an overhaul, said Zuck. The three-foot high stage will be lowered to six inches, and the audience will sit on portable risers.

As far as the rest of M is concerned, the classrooms and office areas along the walls of the center will be converted to storage space for costumes, props, wood, etc. What once were classrooms M101-109 will be the new home for the choral music department.

M111-117 will be Physical Education offices, lockers and showers. Media, ceramics, jewelry, photography, art, sculpture, and dance will all have space in the remodeled M Bldg.

Zuck said that while CD's heating system, located in the basement of A Bldg., is "as good as any there is, maybe the best there is," it is also "an energy guzzler." Therefore, the Board of Trustees had an energy conservation workshop at its last meeting, from which three areas of possible improvement came out, according to Zuck. They are - 1) insulating the walls of A Bldg.; 2) study the available types of heating that can be used for the interim campus; and, 3) the permanent campus.

There isn't any cheap way to heat the campus, said Zuck (the cost of solar heating is "just out of sight" he said), so the present system will be either remodeled, or else the college will have to find another one.

The board also accepted the resignation of Terence Wyllie, admissions counselor, and thanked him for his service to the college.

No new evidence in store theft

Despite the efforts of both the Glen Ellyn police department and College of DuPage campus police, the nine watches stolen recently from the college bookstore have not yet been recovered.

Other than a single fingerprint, very little physical evidence was found at the scene of the crime. Attempts to identify the fingerprint ended in negative results.

A truckload of watches, matching the descriptions of the stolen CD watches, was found recently in Minnesota. However, a further check of serial numbers also proved negative.

Both departments are expected to continue with their investigations; however, chances of recovery are at a minimum.

the graduating class four years from now will be smaller than in 1976. This decline is expected to continue until about 1990.

With a current student population of about 16,000 in credit programs, Groszos named groups other than recent high school graduates as being where future expansion of the college enrollment could lie. He mentioned veterans, senior citizens, "learning-for-living" students and those looking to expand job skills as the areas for possible increase.

According to the report, College of DuPage enrollment is equal to about 2.7 percent of the district's population. If the college retains this percentage, enrollment would be more than 36,000 by the year 2010.

"It's important to be prepared for the growth of municipalities," Groszos said. "With counties, school districts and townships having overlapping boundaries, it's tough to make projections for anything but municipalities."

Groszos plans to keep up with NIPC and DuPage County Regional Planning Commission data as it relates to the college district's growth.

"As with any demographic study, the figures themselves are not as important as how they are used," Groszos said. "We will have a community twice as large to serve in 30 years. It's getting larger right now."

"To maintain growth with the community, we must begin an on-going program to study, prepare for, and meet the needs of the future population of our district."

Dr. Groszos' research capabilities have not passed unnoticed. He was recently appointed chairman of the Research Advisory Council of the Illinois Community College Board.

Save Our Children's language - King's English deserves our "Right To Life" support

By John Meader

I have been accused in the past of being both controversial and of possessing a rather satirical sense of humor. I do not deny these charges. Much to the contrary, I'm really rather flattered by it all.

As you may well know, maintaining a public image can be something of a challenge. This article is, admittedly, an attempt at just that.

With that thought in mind, allow me to present my controversial and, hopefully, humorous views of a much neglected subject: abortion.

Now, before you set a match to this issue or wad the whole thing up and hurl it across the room, please give me a chance to explain.

I am not referring to your everyday abortion — remember, I said, "neglected subject" — rather, I am referring to the abortion that we Americans have been performing on the English language for the past two centuries.

It has often been said that the United States and the United Kingdom are two countries held apart by a common language. There is more than an element of truth in that statement. We have been bastardizing the King's English ever since it was first spoken on our shores.

"Hey! Do you see that guy with Sir Walter Raleigh?"

"Yeah. What about him?"

"I used to know him."

Why is it that when we see a person with whom we are familiar we usually respond with a statement such as that? A careful examination of that statement should show us that it is not only contradictory, but just plain dumb.

If, in fact, you used to know that person, you do not know him now and should not be able to identify him at all. Why can't we correctly say what it is we mean? "Hey, I'm familiar with that person, but I can't recall his name."

"Did you hear about Susan?"

"No, Martha, what about Susan?"

"She died, George."

"That's too bad, Martha. When did it happen?"

"Yesterday, George. Oh, it's so tragic."

So far, so good. We have not yet heard anything worthy of our attention (unless, of course, you knew Susan).

"That is a shame, Martha. She was so young."

"Yes, George. She had her whole life ahead of her."

According to a little known legend, it was at this precise moment that George's wooden teeth became petrified. The reason for this phenomenon is not difficult to understand. There is only one moment when an individual has their whole life ahead of them and that is the moment of birth, not death. At best, Susan had half of her life ahead of her, but even then, we are stretching the concept a bit.

So much for history; I trust history instructor Bernard Stone will forgive my somewhat fictitious accounting of the above events. Moving from the past, I find the present situation not much better.

The abortion of the English language is all around us. In fact, it exists within our own hallowed halls of higher learning. The afterbirth I am referring to is none other than our own college catalog.

Yes, folks, that paragon of information, the official publication of our esteemed institution is becoming more and more suspect. A few selections from this book should bear out my charges.

Let us first consider the catalog's description of our admissions policy.

"College of DuPage does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, sex or national origin in the educational programs or activities which it operates."

Indeed, this, I'm sure, is a most noble concept, but if we do not discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, sex or national origin, on what basis do we discriminate? I think it only fair that we publish a list of "do's" to offset the list of "don'ts."

Parenthetically, there are those individuals who insist that the college does, in fact, discriminate against left-handed students. The number of available writing desks for these individuals is alarmingly disproportionate. It is rumored that the only lower figure on campus is the number of students truly understanding the function of Student Government.

After we have determined that we are not a member of a potentially discriminated minority, we should apply. Once accepted, our next step would be to register. When? Well, according to the catalog, "appointments for new students are determined by when the application for admission is received."

Letter to the Editor

To the editor:

In the July 28 issue of the Courier, a review (if you could call it that) of "La Ronde" written by Jolene Westendorf was printed.

This was, by far, the worst researched piece of journalism (to my knowledge) that has ever been printed in your usually very professional publication.

To start with, Westendorf says there are ten people in the show. This is incorrect, there are 12. She then states that the show is directed by Jack Weiseman (right for once) and that he is assisted by Sue Krabbe and Kathy Long. At least that's half right, but Kathy Long dropped the class and was replaced by John Hubbard two weeks into the quarter.

Then there are such insipidly stupid little phrases such as, "each character was dressed to fit his role, whether the clothes stay on for very long or not is another story." Is such a comment entirely necessary for the review?

With the exception of these minute details, the review was pretty good considering the fact that Westendorf left before the show was over; in the eighth scene, to be exact, out of ten.

(Name withheld by request)

This is the final issue of the 1977 Summer Courier. The editorial staff for this issue included, but was not limited to, John Meader, Barbara Ladner, JoAnn Westrate and Nancy Jenkins. This week's faculty adviser was Tom Lamonica. The next issue of the Courier will be published September 29, 1977. Offices are in the white barn east of J Bldg. Telephone 858-2800, ext. 2379 or 2113. The college is located at Lambert Road and 22nd Street, Glen Ellyn, Ill. 60137.

Commentary does not necessarily reflect the opinion of the staff or College of DuPage.

Oh, really? How does one go about determining by when? I have a five-function digital watch that can't do that. Wouldn't it have been more coherent to say, "appointments for new students are made upon receipt of their application for admission?"

Of course, before we register, we should have some idea of when certain classes are offered. Needless to say, the catalog has not overlooked this aspect. "The college is on the quarter system with the academic year being divided into four quarters..."

How redundant can one sentence be? Of course the academic year is divided into FOUR quarters. Have you ever tried dividing it into THREE quarters? On the other hand, someone may have found the solution to our economic woes; the five quarter dollar.

Is this where the English Language is headed? Meader thinks so.

If we should encounter any difficulties in our new surroundings, we can always seek the aid of a counselor. "Counselors provide personal assistance to help persons explore (the) opportunities for making decisions they want to make."

Apart from the fact that the "they" could refer to either the students or the counselors, I'd far and away prefer to have a counselor help me make a decision I DID NOT want to make. Personally, I've never found it difficult making a decision I wanted to make.

From time to time, we may find it necessary to take stock of our educational progress. We can do so through the Computerized Learning Aid System for Students. CLASS, as it's known within the inner circle, is described in the catalog as being an "interaction with the computer."

This is carrying anthropomorphism a bit too far. How disgusting! I'm not certain, but I believe "interaction with the computer" ranks just below bestiality in the annals of sexual behavior.

If I may get personal for awhile, there are two passages in the catalog that I found to be most offensive. The first describes the special assistance that is available to "educationally disadvantaged veterans."

That phrase is about as subtle as a flame thrower. Why not just come right out and say, "dumb ex-Marine" or something comparable? I would hope that special assistance would be available to all "educationally disadvantaged" students. Why single out us veterans?

The second offensive passage also deals with assistance. Under the heading Health Services, I am told that I can receive such services on a "walk-in" basis. That automatically rules out me and every other person in a wheelchair. Now, that's not nice. I trust somebody will change that policy as soon as possible.

Sometime when you have the chance, read through our catalog. You'll find many more such examples — too many, in fact. One would think that a college would be the last place on earth to produce such drivel. The adage, "physician, heal thyself" could well be applied here.

Left unchecked, this disease could become widespread. Evidence of its symptoms have already been found in the student body (yes, the pun was intended). Consider, if you will, this week's letter to the editor. For obvious reasons, the letter is printed verbatim.

Letter Tudor Editor;

I want you to print this so you're doing a wonderful job, etc. Why are you always using sly techniques to infer that our choking-in-the Student Government people are even stupider than they are? It'd be different if you treated the administration with the same contempt, but you give us cottoncandyish peak about "A Day in the Life of DOCTOR RODNEY BERG." I'm not saying Mr. Bates is great... Mr. Bates works hard, sort of, to improve things a bit perhaps. Now stop this biased propyander right or just shove your Courier up your Tcherenushki.

Sincerely,
(Name withheld)

I didn't believe it either, but there it is. Not since I was a cryptographer in the service have I read a message as undecipherable as that one. I take that back. My seven year old brother once wrote a short story for his Creative Writing-class. With the exception of our letter writer's expert use of punctuation, they both made as much sense.

It should be evident why the author's name was withheld. There is really no point in causing him/her any further embarrassment nor would it be wise to run the risk of a wrist-slashing by his/her English instructor.

Speaking of teachers, I suggest that you consider the possibility of supplementing the traditional English textbook with one of the following two books; "Strictly Speaking" or "A Civil Tongue," both by NBC news correspondent, Edwin Newman. If not used as actual textbooks, they most certainly should be assigned as outside reading material.

I trust by now it has become evident that we need a "Right To Life" approach to the English language. Face it, without our help it could well become an endangered species. And that would truly be "stupider."

"Hey, did you hear about the English language?"

"No, what?"

"It died."

"That's too bad."

"Yeah, it had its whole life ahead of it."

What's new, interesting and profitable in the area

PYRAMID POWER

The history of the ancient pyramids will be the topic of a course on Pyramid Power to be taught by Daniel Kelly Thursdays in Glenbard West High School, Glen Ellyn, during CD's fall quarter.

The nine-week class, offered by the Extension Division, will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Sept. 22 through Nov. 17.

The course investigates by experimentation the cosmic energies purported to the pyramids. Students will build a pyramid among other experiments.

For additional information call 495-3010.

OFF CAMPUS JOBS

United Parcel Service will be on campus August 16 to interview any student interested in part-time employment in Westmont, Addison, or Geneva.

Anyone interested may go to the Student Assistant Center, A2012 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. No appointment is necessary.

REAL ESTATE REVIEW

A concentrated review of the concepts of the real estate salesman's licensing examination given by the Illinois Department of Registration and Education will be given Saturday, Aug. 20 and Saturday, Sept. 17 at CD.

The review sessions will be limited to the first 50 applicants on a first-come, first-served basis. The two sessions will be identical in content.

Paul Subia and Arlene Urban, both CD instructors of real estate, will conduct the seminars from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Room 131 of M Bldg.

It will be assumed that all participants have completed a basic Real Estate Transactions course. Cost of the seminar is $20 per person. The deadline for registration will be Aug. 16 for the first session and Sept. 13 for the second.

For more information, call Subia at ext. 2501.

ON CAMPUS

JOBS AVAILABLE

CD is now hiring part-time student employees in clerical jobs who may work up to 20 hours per week. Any student who is currently enrolled full-time, or who plans on enrolling full-time Fall term, is welcome to apply.

Typing skill of at least 40 words per minute is required for most of these positions which are open in a variety of student service offices. The starting pay rate is $2.50 per hour. These positions would be open year round.

Talking transfer

Don Dame

Students hear many rumors about transferring. The following is an attempt to answer some rumors concerning the transfer process.

RUMOR — If a student takes a five credit course at CD and the same type of course is a four credit course at the transfer school, he "loses" one credit.

NOT TRUE.

THE FACTS: He would receive credit for the course upon transfer and the five credits would be added to his total amount of transferable credits.

RUMOR — If a student receives an A.A. degree from CD, he will never need to take courses listed under General Education at the four-year schools that take our A.A. degree as automatically meeting all general education requirements.

USUALLY TRUE.

THE FACTS: However, the student should check on the required courses for his major. Sometimes the major area (Business, Education, etc.) may require a course in Introduction to Psychology or Sociology or whatever, and if the student does not take the course at CD, he will be required to do so before graduation from the four-year institution. Also, teacher certification requires additional hours of general education above the minimum general education hours for an A.A. degree from CD.

RUMOR — If a student receives a "D" in a course at CD, it will not transfer.

NOT TRUE.

THE FACTS: Many four-year schools now accept "D" grades. The student should consult the transfer institution's catalog to determine its policy on "D" grades.

RUMOR — Almost all four-year schools require an over-all "C" average (2.0 minimum) as a requirement for transfer admission.

TRUE.

RUMOR — Students can only transfer CD courses to four-year colleges and universities in Illinois; it is a "hassle" to transfer to an out-of-state school.

NOT TRUE.

THE FACTS: Former CD students are now attending four-year colleges and universities from coast to coast. If you decided to transfer to an out-of-state school, I would suggest you get the catalog of that school and attempt to take courses at CD that would meet most of that school's general education requirements prior to transfer. You could also meet some of your major requirements prior to transfer.

If you will be attending a four-year school this fall, I wish you well as you continue your education.

MacDougall plans 'less' as football opener nears

Basic offensive and defensive changes are planned for this season by CD football coach Bob MacDougall.

The Chaparrals will still line up the same way and run the same kinds of plays when practice begins Aug. 15. But they plan to do "less" according to MacDougall.

"We plan to have less fumbling and fewer interceptions on offense," MacDougall said. "We plan to have less missed tackles on defense."

By doing "less" in these categories, the Chaparrals should be able to improve on last year's 4-5 record. It was MacDougall's first season at DuPage.

"We just can't make the same mistakes this season," MacDougall said. Statistically, DuPage topped the totals of its nine opponents last season in nearly every offensive category, including fumbles lost and interceptions thrown. On defense, poor tackling allowed several "cheap" touchdowns.

"I know we'll be better," MacDougall said. "But so will everybody else." MacDougall looks for Joliet and Wright to be the teams to beat in the North Central Community College Conference. Illinois Valley, Rock Valley and Harper also should be powerful.

Joliet is DuPage's first opponent. The defending state champions will meet the Chaparrals at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 10 at Downers Grove North High School.

The Chaparral September schedule is as follows:

SEPTEMBER

10	Sat.	Joliet Junior College . . . H	7:30 p.m.
		(at Downers Grove N. H.S.)
17	Sat.	Concordia College . . . A	1:30 p.m.
24	Sat.	Wright . . . H	1:30 p.m.
		(at Glenbard South H.S.)
29	Thu.	Kennedy-King . . . A	7:30 p.m.
		(at Gately Stadium)

Also in sports news, two coaching positions have not been filled at CD for the coming school year. Athletic director Joseph Palmieri is still interviewing for a men's gymnastics coach and an assistant football coach.

Dave Webster, gymnastics coach for nine years, has given up that position to spend more time as head tennis coach for both the men's and women's teams at DuPage.

Head football coach Bob MacDougall is still seeking one more assistant to round out his staff.

These positions do not involve a full-time position at the college. All candidates must have a bachelor's degree.

CD swimmers on top again

Led by sophomore Lisa Fries four members of the CD women's swim team received all-American honors from the National Junior College Athletic Association this past June.

Fries, the team captain, was listed for the 50-yard, 100-yard and 200-yard backstroke events. In addition, she led four CD relay teams cited for all-American honors. It is the second year of all-American recognition for Fries.

Freshman Carol Chambers was listed in the 50-yard, 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke events, the 100-yard individual medley and the 1650-yard freestyle events, in addition to being part of the four all-American relay teams.

Lori Bos and Sherri AuBuchon joined Fries and Chambers in the top-ranked 400-yard freestyle, 200-yard medley, 400-yard medley and 800-yard freestyle relay teams.

After leading the Dupers to the national tournament, coach Judy Leppert announced that she will return for a second year as head coach. Leppert had 13 swimmers last season and is hoping for more participation this year.

Parents invited for campus tours

Parents of students who will be enrolled for the first time at CD this fall are invited to visit the campus to learn more about the college and the types of educational facilities it has to offer the community.

Parents will have eight opportunities to visit the campus: Aug. 16, 18, 22, 24, Sept. 6, 8, 12, and 14, meeting each night at 7 p.m. in A2037.

The meetings will be informal with general discussions of the college followed by tours of the campus.

"We are proud of the educational opportunities available at CD and wish to inform the parents of what we have to offer their sons and daughters," said Mary F. Ehrhardt, coordinator of campus and community activities, who will lead the tour.

Those interested in attending are asked to call ext. 2373.

His songs say more than most words and music

By Joann Westrate

Terry Laughlin, a former CD student, has written and had produced an album of songs he has made available in the CD bookstore. Laughlin is an interesting man, enthusiastic, articulate and thoughtful.

"Fly-Flag-Fly!" is, according to Laughlin, "a potpourri of music; patriotic, religious, Dixieland Jazz, Rock, and Ballads" on subjects to please all ages, musical tastes, and members of the whole family.

"I'm a professional composer," Laughlin said. "I belong to BMI, which is Broadcast Music Incorporated. So if any of these songs are played over the radio, I get a royalty." Laughlin has put over $10,000 of his own money into this venture.

He also owns the publishing firm, Laughlin Enterprises, Inc. and his own label, Xavier Records. The label is registered with the American Federation of Musicians, of which Laughlin is a member.

"A composer gets maybe three or four cents per dollar," he said. "But by setting up my own publishing firm and my own label, I get the lion's share."

Laughlin went to Nashville, Music City USA, to record his album. Tony Di Rizziano produced the album at the Ironside studio, one of the top studios in Nashville. Di Rizziano has about five gold records to his credit when he worked at Capitol Records, Laughlin said.

Laughlin hired Mike Har-Meggido, an Israeli, and his band for the album. Fifteen union musicians were recorded on a 24-track tape deck. Each track is recorded separately, then mixed by specialists to achieve the desired blend.

With his background in marketing and sales, Laughlin decided to do his own merchandising. Record stores get albums on consignment, and what they don't sell they ship back. The distributor gets his money when the dealer gets paid by the consumer. It takes a lot of time before the manufacturer gets paid. This requires a great deal of capital.

"I'm just marketing in a limited way," Laughlin said. "I don't have it distributed in Chicago. I'm waiting to see what some of the major labels do. If they don't do it, I'll probably get a distributor."

Laughlin added, "What we're talking about is publicity and exposure. The hardest thing is getting this thing off the ground, which is what I'm doing now. So I'm taking my time. I'm not in any big hurry."

A substantial share of the album's profits will go into a trust fund for the Notre Dame Foundation, Laughlin's alma mater, and the Holy Cross Association.

Both Laughlin's music and lyrics have a natural simplicity. He has good beats, and is versatile in his musical stylings. Each song is dedicated to someone dear to him.

TERRY LAUGHLIN

The album's title song, "Fly - Flag - Fly!", was inspired by Laughlin's visit to the shrine built over the USS Arizona, sunk during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. "Over a thousand bodies are still buried there," he said. "They tried to dig them up. They send divers down and the divers got killed trying to get bodies up, so they just left them there."

The turret of the ship sticks up through the water, and they've attached a flagpole to it, from which flies the flag that inspired the song. This song is dedicated to President Jimmy Carter, a former U.S. Naval officer, who has visited the shrine.

Laughlin wrote the poem, "Ulysses," when he was a senior in high school. It is dedicated to the late Archbishop Makarios III, president of Cyprus. "This kind of an underground-type song," Laughlin said. "It tells the story of the Trojan War. There's very much the Greek patriot about it. I'm sure the Turks wouldn't appreciate it. They're still fighting. The Turks are the descendants of the Trojans."

"The Man With the Hoe" was inspired by the painting and poem of the same name, and is dedicated to Dolly Parton. The music is described by Laughlin as a Spanish / Moorish arabesque. It has quite a message to it.

"The First Principle of St. Ignatius," a "theological chant," is dedicated to Thomas J. Duehl, S.J., a good friend of Laughlin's wife. The words were written more than 400 years ago by St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Jesuits.

"Where Is the Eagle - Gone" is dedicated to Tony Di Rizziano. The words were written by Chief Seattle to President Franklin Pierce more than 120 years ago. He tells how the white man does not have the love of the land the Indian has, and will surely destroy it. It has a prophetic ring and its eloquence will haunt you.

"Where Is the Eagle - Gone" alone is worth the price of the album.

With their needed $13,000 earned and their appreciation concert performed, CD's Swing Singers and Chamber Singers have only packing left before they board a plane for England on August 14.

The singers, some of whom are shown above, will be giving concerts in England, Scotland and Wales.

"We are going to do our best to represent CD at its best," said Dr. Carl A. Lambert, director of the singers. "As the first group from the college to perform abroad, we realize our responsibility as we extend the reputation of College of DuPage internationally."
