10-1-2010

The Props at My Funeral

Jason Sturner
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: http://dc.cod.edu/plr

Recommended Citation

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@C.O.D.. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@C.O.D.. For more information, please contact koteles@cod.edu.
The Props at My Funeral

Jason Sturner

While I sleep
throw ropes down my mouth.
Climb in—
But beware of the biting words that linger along the throat.
They are bitter, always questioning
destiny’s decisions.
When you reach a path lit by embers
Grab your cross, and hold it tight.
There, bits of heart decompose along the turn.
You should cover your head, for it drips still off the ribs (Remnants of a splat-ter-ed love affair).
You may even see her against the starless dark.
A ghostly angel playing the loose string of a smashed violin...
(It is true: sometimes the old sounds are deafening and you can’t hear the new ones)
But I digress.
Follow the map that I gave you and gather the props as you go:
The rusty crown.
The bloody pile of nightingale feathers.
The broken teeth of one genuine smile.
And don’t forget the dried up pen and quill.
I should remind you now
to leave by morning, for tomorrow I will sit at the edge of the world.
There I will smile into the rising sun and without a thought drop off.