Letter from the Editor

Heather Armstrong

It has been an exciting semester here at The Prairie Light Review, we have been fortunate that our streak of submissions has continued, and I am proud to say that this issue is one my team and I are proud of. I must thank all of you that have submitted your work to us, without your submissions our magazine would not be possible.

I must also thank my colleagues who worked tirelessly on this issue. Without their hard work the production process would not have been possible. I especially want to thank our advisor Jackie, who has made sure that we work as a team. She helped to facilitate great student lead discussions on content, theme and many of the other discussions we have in generating our magazine.

The Prairie Light Review has been a great experience for me as both a teamwork experience, as well as an editing experience. I am grateful to be a part of this great College of DuPage publication.

Special Thanks

Thanks to the College of DuPage staff and faculty whose support for this magazine is invaluable. Special thanks to Chuck Steele, Mardi Roebuck-Knight, Shannon Hernandez, Stephanie Quirk, Chris Raposa, Mikata Jokkene, and the COD Office of Student Life. Thanks to Liz Whiteacre, Tom Montgomery-Fate, the Prairie Writing Award, the Writers Read series, and the COD Creative Writing Committee for their support and encouragement. Thanks to the COD Library, especially Colin Koteles for his work on Digital Commons. Thanks to the COD Photography faculty, especially Glenn Hansen, for providing studio space. Thanks to the IT department, especial Hashem Helmi, for technical assistance. Thanks to the Liberal Arts Division, including Daniel Lloyd, Bev Reed, and Rita Puishes, and to the Academic Affairs office, including Joe Collins. Special thanks to Magi Wangler for lending her time and knowledge in the photography studio.
