I Tell Her

Tom Hill

College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.cod.edu/plr

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol34/iss2/21

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.
I tell her: we must get at the ground, deep beneath the dirt, where the roots are.

Only here can we make ourselves strong; here, where our proofs and reasons lie buried.

We must separate the wheat from the chaff, we must harvest only good things.

Remember how we want our lives to feel: like drunkenness; gentle and warm, eyes cloudy with God and smoke, with the beauty of cold summer.

I thought of our lives patched together pieced together, pressed together and brimming with purpose, lives like old shoes; gentle and worn, like the stars tonight --wherever they are-- bright but hidden.

The cabin’s air was stale and cold
His rotten heart iced over
A blood-shot flight to Walden Pond
To escape his new ex-lover