about

Prairie Light Review is the College of DuPage art and literature journal. We are a student-run, biannual publication. All material is the work of students and residents of District 502 and has been selected blindly to ensure objectivity. This magazine seeks to celebrate and showcase the creative talents of our diverse community, and inspire those who read it. We are proud to present to you the Spring 2015 edition of the Prairie Light Review!

gratitude

Many thanks to the college of DuPage faculty and staff, whose support for this journal helps us continue to grow. Special thanks to Chuck Steele, Shannon Hernandez, Mardi Roebuck, Gaea Atta and the COD Office of Student Life for generously planting their seeds of knowledge. Thanks to the student Assistant Editors of PLR, whose unfailing commitment has sown healthy professionalism, creativity, enthusiasm, and excellence in this journal. Thanks to the COD Creative Writing Committee, and the Writers Read series for their continued support and encouragement. Thanks to COD Library; Facilities Operations; the Liberal Arts Division, including Daniel Lloyd, Sheldon Walcher, and Rita Puishes; and the Administration, with special thanks to Dr. Kartje.
