INNOCENCE

Alison Balinski

I danced and danced.
I giggled and giggled.
I sang and sang.
I twirled and twirled.

Nothing could go wrong.
I was always able to escape.
My imagination kept me going.
My dreams kept me happy.

All around me a war raged.
I cried silently.
But I was a child,
So nothing could touch me.

They screamed.
I played dolls.

They hit.
I wrote a play.

They drank.
I swam in the bathtub.

They cursed.
I drew castles with princesses.

Twenty-three years have gone by.
The war is still in full swing,
no ending can I see.
My dreams no longer work.
I have no choice but to run and hide.
