

Fall 12-1-2017

For Lack of a Hero

Jessica Shubert
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <http://dc.cod.edu/plr>

---

Recommended Citation

Shubert, Jessica (2017) "For Lack of a Hero," The Prairie Light Review: Vol. 40 : No. 1 , Article 19.
Available at: <http://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol40/iss1/19>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

Hit And Run

Amy Peter

Someone's uncle,
Someone's father,
Someone's husband of nearly 30 years;
met an untimely end staring into headlights.
He didn't deserve to die at a speeding car's mercy.
Even if he'd been more visible,
it still might not have stopped.
The driver that blew through the crosswalk didn't give the man a second thought.
Hit and runs are a tragedy,
but they happen every day.
As long as people are so rushed;
neither car nor man look both ways.
The family doesn't know who killed him,
and they probably never will;
but that doesn't mean they'll stop searching.
Justice for the hit and run killer,
and the victim gone too soon.

For Lack of a Hero

Jessica Shubert

Pigeons scattered as the gentleman with the tailored suit walked up to where the woman sat on a flattened Coke box, plucking a banjo. A nickel or dime would drop into a cap crumpled on the sidewalk occasionally.

“You're six cents out of tune, my dear,” the gentleman said.

“And sixty cents short of a sandwich,” she replied without stopping.

He glanced around, sniffed, and left.

When he returned, he set the sleek case down and opened it, smiling self-consciously. She shifted for him to join her, cross-legged on the cardboard stage. The banjo led and the violin played along.