care. I turned my phone off that night. I can't bear to look at the lock screen anyways. It's still the picture of us on our first vacation in Italy. You loved the food there so much.

We had walked through the streets without a care, laughing and smiling together. It hurts to think about. I bought you a necklace, a small sun with an opal as the center. You loved them so much, I showered you in them. You said the shards of rainbow reflected the light in my eyes. I never agreed, but I just loved to see you happy.

Love always,

Your Rainbow

With shaking hands I pulled the cover up, revealing the balled up paper.

Ms. Etheridge,

This letter is to inform you that Kim Lu has passed away.
