EPITAPH

Glen H. Brown

The 200 watt receiver
atomized the house daily
with vibratory shock.
In less than two years
the music would die,
his body paralyzed, brain-dead,
despite the megadoses
of vitamins and AZT.
But in the walls of his mind
Disco throbbed
Jamaican rhythms,
and he danced a life
across parquet, played out on dual turntables
until it phased out
like the needle
of his stereo system.
