

Spring 5-1-1989

Moon Horror

Glen H. Brown
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Brown, Glen H. (1989) "Moon Horror," The Prairie Light Review: Vol. 8 : No. 2 , Article 39.
Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol8/iss2/39>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

My eyes,
Big,
Brown
a pool of chocolate
in which you slowly drown.
My stare,
Deep,
yet only to the surface.
Mysterious
to you, but to me
a game.
Beautiful,
my smile,
yet seldom seen.
Sexy,
my mouth that
kisses you
tenderly:
Deadly.
Expanding my poison
into you that Love and Lust
may grow.

Rita Rosales

MOON HORROR

Glen H. Brown

Once I saw the moon
drift up as if balanced
by invisible legs.

I saw it melt, then freeze,
lose itself like a face
vanishing at night,
like white fire fallen to ash.

I feared this most:
this white wingless stone
drifting alone at night.

I stood quietly;
afraid of what infinitely
surrounded it — those things
older than love and death.