FEARS A NIGHTMARE

Joannie Liesenfelt

Like endless walls of tapestries
Whipping in some rippled wind,
Unceasingly they fold, unfold
And fold again, a ragged dance
Of canvas skins where edges meet
Unraveled ends then flail apart
In shaking bends, unfold
And then unfold again.

And the sound, it never ceases:
That whipping wall that blankets all,
That crashing whoosh as edges seek
To smooth in folds that quiet meet.
So sleek this raveled skin could waltz
If tapestried with salvaged cloth.
