

Fall 12-1-1987

Possessed: A Yuppie Anthem

Daniel L. Lowery
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Lowery, Daniel L. (1987) "Possessed: A Yuppie Anthem," The Prairie Light Review: Vol. 7 : No. 1 , Article 36.
Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol7/iss1/36>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

POSSESSED: A Yuppie Anthem

Daniel L. Lowery

You became mine
when you gave yourself
— to me —and let me
have my way with you.

Because you were mine
I put you on a shelf
or an old canvas bag
and anything else
I found convenient.

Then I became yours
when I placed a circular object
on your finger
and splattered ink across a page; I said some magic words
so everyone knew I was yours.

You could prove I was yours with records and documents that only legal minds could dissect.
Which is what you did when you wanted the house, the car, and the children.

Even though the children were yours,
you did have to lease them to me on weekends . . . until the children were no longer yours,
but themselves.

We spent the rest of our lives exchanging bitter pleasantries at grandchildren's birthday parties and tried to out-do each with expensive gifts.

Then we died
leaving all we had behind us.