Physicists marry artists . . .

lunging for their loins,

coupling with creativity . . .

softening their science.

Kathleen Keenan

In their back yard
our neighbors have erected a large wooden cross.

It's large enough
and sturdy enough
to crucify someone,
but I don't think
they intend to.

They're far too up to date for that.
Instead it supports a device
for electrocuting mosquitoes.
