It Isn't A Fairytale, But It's Nice

J. B. Korwel
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.cod.edu/plr

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol2/iss3/18

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.
Korwel: It Isn't A Fairytale, But It's Nice

TOMORROWS BATTLE

The Indian and the Trooper
had been friends for many a year

Today they met in secret
and discussed the coming battle

Both were fluent in each others
tongue

They argued the outcome
of tomorrow's freey

The Indian bragged of his fearless
allies

And in his turn so did the Trooper

So proud was each
one of his General
the other of his chief

As night drew near
they wished each other
luck and reaffirmed
their eternal friendship

Both were killed the following day

— Richard Hay, Sr.

IT ISN'T A FAIRYTALE, BUT IT'S NICE

It isn't a fairytale.
Did we ever court?
It can't be a wedding,
the guest list is too abbreviated.
Yet today I will take you,
neatly for wife,
perhaps for most of our lives.
Linger awhile,
we've special moments ahead,
memories to create,
and courses to set.
Material moderation,
o no lace gown, no church.
Just we essentials,
and a speck, even rented,
peaceful, our somewhere on earth.
We are each others burden,
to be carried in bliss,
as light as true caring,
eeased upward by trust.
Forever is long,
longer than I can know.
Let's deal in tomorrows,
look
one's already here!
So today I will take you,
neatly for wife,
for friend, intimate and lover,
perhaps for most of our lives.
Did I tell you that yesterday?
Have we already shared?
We will encore tomorrow,
should both of us be so yearn.
We fill each others void well,
and though no fairytale this,
to trust, trust completely
is a treasure from youth.

— Kathy Corra

SOLO

I arrive at the open green field where she waits for me.
The bright rays of the summer can reflect off her skin.
She says not a word as I move my hands over her smooth
body.
I enter her and take control.
Her every movement is by my command.
We leave the constrictions of the earth as we take to the sky.
It's only the two of us among the clouds of white,
and the skies of blue.
We climb and fall, we move in and out, up and down,
speed and glide, we are one.
Our only restriction finds us, it is time of light.
We have used our day's quota and to earth we glide.
I release my gentle hold on her as we descend to the cold
darkened earth.
I leave her now, across the field of light I once knew
to let her sleep on in night's hand.
Off I go, to dream of the time when we'll be together again.

— Brian Murphy