

Winter 3-11-1983

Untitled

Larry Friedman
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Friedman, Larry (1983) "Untitled," The Prairie Light Review: Vol. 2 : No. 2 , Article 19.
Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol2/iss2/19>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

SOLZHENITSYN'S SCHISM

*This world, you say, is but a mundane egg
Cracked — split, torn apart, like
A softball in the late innings,
Might even have to postpone the game,
Cancel the playoffs
And turn out the lights for a century or two.
What's that, Al, we haven't suffered enough?
Too soft and out of shape?
Don't worry, there's another slide under way
That'll shake down the markets,
Throw the gold bugs into a frenzy,
Stir up the old primal juices and
Get things jumpin' again.
And meantime, Al, don't you fret about
Your papa's already crossed the Alps
(not even the king of decline had that in mind for this millenium)
And as for nerve, we've got plenty
On reserve, bottled up,
Sittin' on a shelf in South Carolina
In case things get out of hand.*

— Charlie Kostelnick

*One man said to another,
"I'm going to fight with nature and win."
The other man said, "It's impossible."
The first man said, "I can."*

*He chopped down 40 trees,
And burned 40 more,
He polluted the land and oceans,
He polluted the sandy shores.*

*He built a factory,
Filling the sky with smoke,
Destroying all wildlife,
He laughed — what a joke.*

*The man stood alone on the dead black earth,
Then he realized something frightening,
What had he proved by struggling with nature,
Then he was struck by lightning.*

— Larry Friedman

WARRIOR

Truman Fox

*He had no arms —
And there were stumps —
Where his legs —
Used to be.
But a face so full —
With black/grey beard —
Was all —
That I could see.*

*Half a man?
He could not be —
For there is no such creature.
His eyes and soul —*

*Contained the limbs —
That a total man would feature.*

*Our eyes met —
And intertwined.
He filled my soul with hope.
Life shined bright —
Within his glance —
And I knew —
That he could cope.*

*A voice so soft —
Pierced my ears —
And a booming cry rang out.
INSIDE OF ME —
But NOT in him —
He had no time for doubt.*

*Boy child playing —
Grown man running —
The battle —
Has led you to hell.
And you are not —
Just any man —
You've served your country —
Well??*

— Mary Ryder-Swanson