

The Prairie Light Review

Volume 44
Number 2 Spring 2022

Article 59

Spring 5-1-2022

The Heart of Ice

Elias Muir
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Muir, Elias (2022) "The Heart of Ice," The Prairie Light Review. Vol. 44: No. 2, Article 59.
Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol44/iss2/59>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

The Heart of Ice

Elias Muir

It was stolen but never returned in one piece, that which shatters can never become whole and is filled with grief

The moment you reach for but doesn't reach back, grinds to a halt as the world starts to crack

Forget the times that could've been instead, and glance up to realize you're not right in the head

One step forward, a dozen steps behind, is there a point in time where you can rewind?

Reach for your hand and sigh in defeat, for no one will come to make you complete

To a heart filled with the urges of desire, nothing is left but the remnants of a would-be fire

A change is upon you, this you realize, so maybe it's for the best that you just demonize

Grab your mind and shake away these vile thoughts, or just clutch your heart until it freezes and rots

Time passes by, but one thing's for sure, you'll never want to experience this without a proper cure

A changed person you are, but something's amiss, you now feel no different than a frosty abyss

Look around it, and see your worldview in complete apathy, it seems to me there's been an adjustment to your weak mentality

A brutal-born hatred for the other side

Wake up!

It wasn't their fault that you were denied

Get ahold of yourself or this suffering will most likely suffice, of turning your heart into unbreakable ice