

The Prairie Light Review

Volume 44
Number 2 Spring 2022

Article 60

Spring 5-1-2022

The Environmental Exchange

Elora Choudhury
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Choudhury, Elora (2022) "The Environmental Exchange," The Prairie Light Review. Vol. 44: No. 2, Article 60.
Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol44/iss2/60>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

The Environmental Exchange Elora Choudhury

A world that cries for its oceans
A world that rages for its forests
Who listens?

A man who wipes the tears for their fortune
A man who cuts the trees for humanity's promotions
He witnesses, but he hasn't wept yet

Habitats retaliate in their rave
The world screams their emotions
What was once planted is being ripped from the roots or bent by his boots
He hears, but he's counting his bets

A people who fight for life, then for vitality and value so ripe
They forget the seeds and who they steal from

The world has dry eyes
It has barren trees to grasp for comfort
As its life sinks, everything burns

A planter wonders if they were smart enough to rely on the sky and ground for their flowers, since they cannot work together

And why shouldn't they?
It will all be left to decay...
For the ones who can't share, are the ones who pay

Safe Together,
Tim Arroyo

