Contemplating Matrimony

Ixta Julieta

The color of my hair in the sunset is the last wish you'll make, you say.
We are two rocks tethered to one another by a weathered rope. The sky is a healing bruise over our movements
and birds circle above, searching for marrow.
Murmur. Say my arching spine is the hill you would die on.
