Call of the Sea

ABDUL MALIK MANDANI

At a boisterous beach amid a milling crowd
I am lost trying to gather my thoughts on the shore of the sea grain by grain in the glow of the setting sun.

Struggling against the rising tide stirred by a howling wind I try furtively to somehow garner the dissipating sunbeams.

I get up
as the relentless waves swash and ripple around my feet insistent upon reining me in with the pull of the rip current.

I turn around in the gathering darkness to walk away from this restive sea.

Led by my shadow,
and my footprints following me,
I get lost on my way home.
