Sky Glow

ABDUL MALIK MANDANI

It's a warm and surreally serene night.

A great milky wheel of stars rises at the midnight's horizon wet and shivering from the waves, and the silver pale light of a gibbous moon settles on the sea glistening its tinsel-crested heaving bosom.

Moonlight rushes with every rolling wave to the shore as if the light itself was pulling the waves, The moon had cast the great net of silver light and gathered up the whole sea hauling it to the shore wave by wave.
