phantom _Karian Markos

a some color sky hovers above us you and I breathe the same current one faces right one faces left

I leave an impression quickly swallowed before a glimpse of my shadow tells you I had been lying there

(solidified)

my whisper crept behind your eyes and constructed a vision so clear you touch the space my words created beneath an invisible blanket I sleep soundly tucked under the same or maybe just thick magazines stuffed down striped socks.

Not Identified _Jason Snart

He is not identified in the photograph of the Dauphin Juniors
hockey team 1926-27 squeezed between Captain Scrase and George "Troque" Heard who of course signed with the Rangers, 1927.

He is standing with the rest wanting, it looks, to smile but maybe not sure if that's what you do in a hockey photograph.

Wearing his jersey proud flying D on the chest real leather gloves and shin pads

This is the decade before threshing gangs made a dollar a day and the depression strangled the prairies though hockey became more popular then:
fewer people worked.

I couldn't tell you anything about this hockey player though he is preserved in Dogtown to Dauphin.

His life may have been as crooked as "Squee" Heard's who told the Rangers that his brother Troque was a boozier, or

it could have been straight and simple as his hockey stick.
