

The Prairie Light Review

Volume 46
Number 2 Spring 2024

Article 17

Spring 5-1-2024

The Morning Bird and the Night Owl

Sofia Love
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Love, Sofia (2024) "The Morning Bird and the Night Owl," The Prairie Light Review. Vol. 46: No. 2, Article 17.

Available at: <https://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol46/iss2/17>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact orenick@cod.edu.

The Morning Bird and the Night Owl

Sofia Love

If my lover was a bird
she would be an owl awake and listening to my breathing late in the night

If my lover had to wake up early I would gentle her half-asleep form into sitting and pull on her fluffy socks so her feet wouldn't get cold in the morning

If my lover's body was hungry but her mind wasn't I would still put food in front of her and hold her if it was too much

If my lover's mind was hungry but her body wasn't I would offer up a piece of my arm or leg or neck or shoulder

If I was awake in the early hours of the morning I would curl against her in her sleep and whisper against her neck i love you i love you i love you i love you

Karl Weber — Photogram

Floating

Flying

Dakoda McCallum

"What's it like to fly?" she asked the little bird.
It shook its head and trilled a little.

"I suppose it's like walking around," it said.

The woman shook her head.

"But you are in company among the clouds," she said. "You go where I cannot.
You see things from up high. It must be so much more than walking."