I, Like a Child

Russell Emmert
I, Like a Child

Russel Emmert

it was just me sniffling at that lake, watching the lucky sun set itself in the warm, caring hands of the horizon, where it felt comfort after burning all day like coming home to a wife.

A couple leaves fell slow like tears, and the grassy distance looked like a silhouette of a man with a stubbled chin—but the clouds divorced him and left.

Many roses littered the lake (laying seductively with that perfume of a real woman with red eye shadow, red lips and a red light beating my heart into frenzied, rhythmic desire), but not a single dandelion all dolled up for her one prom night (after working all day to be beautiful) where the rose scents that excited bees and boys lead to the act that scattered her innocence into the wind like a child forcing a selfish wish on a selfless woman.